GORDON MURDER CLEARED

Chicago's New Tammany. And a Petrified Elephant. The Fords Must Rough It. A Useful 'Don't.'

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

MORE IMPORTANT than the fall of William Hale Thompson, or the rise of Anton J. Cermak in Chicago's mayoralty fight, is the fact pointed out by Michael W. Straus, that a "Chicago Tammany" is now in power.

Cermak, whom friends describe as a determined, able man, has long been boss of Chicago Democrats. Many believe his organization is in power to stay and may make of Illinois a Democratic state.

This interests the Republican party for 1932.

A HUGE petrified elephant with tusks six feet long, a foot and a half thick, is found in the bed of a dry lake on an almost inaccessible mountain in the Mexican state of Nayarit.

Much bigger than any we know, this Mexican monster lived and died far from Washington. But unless Washington's Republican elephant manages to do something between now and 1932 about unemployment, nationwide crime, racketeering, etc., it may find itself much like its petrified Mexican brother.

A HENRY FORD balance sheet, filed in Massachusetts, shows that Ford in 1930 made only $44,460,823, compared with $81,797,861 in 1929. The United States Ford Company has, at most, three stockholders, Mr. Ford, Mrs. Ford and their son, Edsel Ford.

The drop in profits probably does not worry them particularly. Three could easily rough it on $44,460,823 a year, and even put by something for a rainy day.

DEAN LOOMIS, of New York University, offers among "don'ts" to parents, this excellent one:

"Don't urge your children to go to college because you went, or because you didn't, or because the youngster's chums are going, or because it is the avenue to a sorority, or fraternity, or to athletic success."

College life hurts as often as it helps, and oftener. Better for a young man to spend four years at work realizing his shortcomings than more or less at study acquiring an exaggerated idea of his own importance.

YESTERDAY IN the Cathedral of Palermo, Sicily, Prince Henri, son of the Duke of Guise, pretender to the French throne, married Princess Isabelle of Orleans and Bragance.

Both are descendants of the last king of France. Much royalty attended the wedding, the ceremony performed by Cardinal Lavitrano.

The Vatican objected to the presence of two excommunicated editors, Leon Daudet and Charles Maurres, but objection was withdrawn when it appeared that the two were there as working newspaper men, not as guests.

AS FAR as royalty goes that wedding was like marrying a Confederate $5 bill to one of the $1,000 Kerensky bonds.

They are a nice young couple, 23 and 18 years old, but so far as the throne of France is concerned, they are as much out of date as the Confederate money or the Russian bond.

France is republican and will remain republican. Bourbons that "never learned anything and never forgot anything" will never come back.

THE DEPARTMENT of Labor, in spite of all the talk against lowering wages, finds energetic wage slashing in progress. It began one year after the depression in 1929. There is official record of 340 wage reductions in March.

In January, according to the government, there were 6,050,000 idle. The American Federation of Labor says there were more. You are also told that "funds for the jobless are about exhausted. A crisis is feared."

THE BRITISH, who know that anything is cheaper than revolution, take care of their difficulty with a dole, handing money direct to the family to be spent for the family, and avoiding the heavy "overhead" of charitable organizations.

Fortunately, we are far from any revolution here.

MRS. MORSE RUMMEL, who lives in Paris, and was 80 years old yesterday, wants you to know that her father, S. F. B. Morse, inventor of telegraphy, was a brilliant painter as well as an inventor.

He conferred a great blessing on mankind, but thought more of his pictures, it is said, than of his invention. So it is often. Jefferson, great actor, thought he was a painter first, an actor second. Cardinal Richelieu, a really great statesman, considered himself a great poet.

PREPARE FOR disappointment when, on Friday, after mature deliberation, careful tests, and much cogitation, you pick out your brand of cigarets.

You will find that the price increased to 15 cents a package, 27 cents for two. This will enable retailers to make a reasonable profit, which they haven't been able to do lately, and that should comfort you.

EARTHQUAKE NEWS, frequent all over the world, comes today from Santiago, Chile, and the distressed city of Managua, Nicaragua.

Miss Cristabel Pankhurst, daughter of the late suffragette leader, believes that our earthquakes and other disasters foretell the second coming of the Saviour. She has written a book telling how and why the time of the second advent has arrived. She predicts that this time the Lord will come in power and glory, not in humility, and will rule with a rod of iron, very soon.

LONGWORTH DIES; WIFE AT SIDE

Pneumonia Attack Fatal; President Hoover Will Go To Funeral in Cincinnati

AIKEN, S. C., April 9.—(AP.)—Nicholas Longworth, Speaker of the National House of Representatives, died here at 10:49 a. m. today.

At his bedside was his wife, the former Alice Roosevelt, daughter of President Theodore Roosevelt, and his friend, Mrs. James F. Curtis, at whose home he contracted the disease. His daughter, Paulina, was not with him.

Taken sick Monday, physicians diagnosed his illness as pneumonia Monday night. He steadily grew worse and 48 hours later they admitted his condition was desperate.

AMAZING VITALITY

Longworth's amazing vitality, physicians said, alone kept him alive during last night and until his death. He was taken ill last Monday of pneumonia in one lung.

Mrs. Longworth telephoned the speakers office in Washington this afternoon that the funeral will be held at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon in Cincinnati. Services will be held at the Longworth home, "Rookwood."

The widow declined to have a state funeral held, although it was learned here the White House had announced President Hoover would attend.

Funeral arrangements were placed in hands of Sergeant-at-Arms Rogers, of the House, at Washington, and he immediately got into communication with railroad officials to make special provisions for the funeral party.

Mrs. Longworth was notified as soon as it was determined he was suffering from pneumonia and she arrived in Aiken Wednesday morning. Her fortitude, Dr. R. H. Wilds, of Aiken, one of the attending physicians, said, was remarkable.

"Princess Alice," despite the long hours of vigilance, bore up magnificently under the blow of her loss. She was a Roosevelt, it was expected of her and, as always, she was equal to it.

Two of Mrs. Longworth's brothers, Kermit and Archibald Roosevelt, were believed to be speeding to the bedside in a plane, but they had not arrived at the time of the Speaker's death.

IN SOUTH FOR REST

Mr. Longworth arrived in Aiken March 30 to rest after the arduous duties as Speaker of the House. He developed a cold soon after arriving, but it was not believed serious until this week.

He had played a little golf after arriving, friends said, but had

GOV. PINCHOT ORDERS SUIT ON RATES

Hires Expert to Draft Case Against Duquesne Light; Cites Many Complaints

By ED PRENDERGAST
Staff Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, April 9.—Gov. Gifford Pinchot today fastened his attention on the Pittsburgh utilities and announced the appointment of an advisor to prepare a rate case against the Duquesne Light Company.

Maj. Clayton W. Pike, Philadelphia consulting engineer, was named to conduct the investigation.

In addition, a Philadelphia rate case is being prepared.

The appointment of Maj. Pike to investigate power rates in Pittsburgh means that for the first time a disinterested study of the operations of the Duquesne Light Company will be made; for the first time an independent valuation will be placed on the properties, and for the first time an attempt will be made to determine whether or not Pittsburghers are being charged reasonable rates for electricity.

PINCHOT STATEMENT

The Governor's statement follows:

"I have retained Maj. Clayton W. Pike, consulting engineer, of Philadelphia, and former president of the Engineers' Club, to advise me with regard to the electric rate situation in Pittsburgh.

"What I have in mind is to prepare for a rate case against the Duquesne Light Company upon the passage of the new public utility law and the appointment of the fair rate board.

COMPLAINTS CITED

"The large number of complaints I am receiving about the rates and service of several large utilities, and the testimony given before the House investigating committee, clearly indicates the pressing need for action.

"I am unwilling to lose any time that can possibly be saved in giving the rate payers relief.

"The only line that is open to me at the moment is the

'BUTTERFLY' SLAIN BY ROBBER

3 Named in Vivian's Diary And 2 Others Arrested; 1 Charged With Killing

NEW YORK, April 9.—(AP.)—Vivian Gordon's strangling murder mystery was cleared today.

The man charged with her murder, arrested last night, was Harry Stein, who went to prison in 1921 for attempting to strangle a woman.

Three others are held as material witnesses, and a fifth, whose connection with the case was not made clear, was held for possessing a pistol and burglar tools. He said he formerly was a Canadian mounted policeman.

The motive for the murder, police said, was robbery.

By a coincidence, all five men gave their place of birth as Russia.

Vivian Gordon was strangled and her body was thrown into a thicket in Van Cortlandt Park on the morning of February 26.

Besides Stein, those arrested were Samuel Greenhauer, alias Greenberg, Greenhear and "Greenie," 44, a tailor; Morris (Doc) Levine, 36, electrician; David Butterman, 34, jobber, and Jack Holdcroft, 29, former Canadian trooper.

Skeleton keys and a pistol were found in Holdcroft's room. Stein, Levine and Greenhauer are three of the men mentiond in Vivian Gordon's diary—the diary in which she set down her affairs of love and blackmail and fear. They denied knowing the Gordon woman. They could not explain their names in her diary.

ANOTHER DELAY FOR AIRPORT

Another six-month delay in the completion of Allegheny County's $2,500,000 airport was revealed today in an announcement from C. W. Forcier, airport manager, that the project will not be finished until August or September. The field will be suitable for temporary flying, however, by June or July, Forcier said, explaining the reason for the long period of delays and $2,500,000 expenditure.

He said:

"The immensity of the project speaks for itself. We are making all the headway possible, and our one endeavor is to make a portion of the field ready for immediate flying. It should be available by June or July."

HOOVER, NATION LAUD SPEAKER

WASHINGTON, April 9.—(AP.)—President Hoover, upon learning of the death of Nicholas Longworth, said that "he contributed greatly to the welfare of the American people" during a service of over 33 years.

The President's statement said:

"Mr. Longworth served his fellow countrymen in state and nation for over 33 years—nearly the whole of his adult life. In his service he contributed greatly to the welfare of the American people. His happy character, his sterling honesty, his courage in public questions, endeared him and held the respect not alone of his myriad of friends but of the country at large.

If Brookhart Dries Up Canal We'll Dig Again

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Senator Brookhart, of Iowa, insists on drying the Panama Canal.

Well, we will dig another one.

The Senator was much shocked to see sailors ashore getting sea-legs without the help of a storm.

Panama is very wet. It's a tempest in a hiccup.

And when in Panama you must do as the Panamanians do. You can even do it twice.

Mr. Brookhart claims the Eighteenth Amendment is as successfully enforced as the Ten Commandments.

That's a bet. If he thinks so, 10 will get him 18.

Panama is a sort of filling station for American sailors and soldiers. And we do not think

Longworth's Bible 'Pupil' Recalls Favorite Verse

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(AP.)—Harry Parker, veteran Negro doorman of the ways and means committee on which Nicholas Longworth began his rise to leadership in the House, quoted the Speaker's favorite scripture passage today as news of the death was received.

"To everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the Heaven: a time to be born and a time to die; a time to plant and a time to pluck up that which is planted."

This beginning of the third chapter of Ecclesiastes, Harry said, the Speaker asked him to quote hundreds of times.

Pointing to it in President McKinley's Bible, a property of the committee, Harry said the Speaker had smiled appreciatively over the passage on the day before he left Washington.

Friends of Longworth today wondered whether his last words to the House on March 4, were prophetic of his fate. After Longworth had been praised for his fairness in presiding over the House and members had joked over the close political division which made his re-election as speaker in the new congress doubtful, Longworth said:

"My colleagues, I need not say that I am profoundly grateful for this demonstration of your affection. Perhaps this is the last time I will address you from this rostrum. The decision lies with none of us. It is a decision that lies with an all wise Providence."

When Longworth remarked that he might not again address members from the Speaker's chair, there was good-natured laughter and applause.

KLINE PASSES CRISIS

Mayor Charles H. Kline, operated on in St. Francis Hospital for a malignant carbuncle, was reported out of danger today by Dr. Huber Wagner. After the physician's visit, the Mayor obtained another bed, as the one which he had been using was too low and he could not see out of the window.

Dr. William O'Neil Sherman issued a bulletin on Mayor Kline's condition today as follows:

"The Mayor continues to make satisfactory improvement. He spent a satisfactory night. He will be confined to the hospital for the next two or three weeks."

Councilman W. Y. English, one of the administration leaders in City Council, a visitor at the hospital last night, was not admitted to the Mayor's room.

County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong and George Schad, member of the board for revision and assessment of taxes, were denied admission to the Mayor's room today. Armstrong was told the Mayor was "resting well."

City Detective Edward Harkins took a station outside the door of the Mayor's room early today. He would not admit he had been assigned as a guard, but apparently had been

Letters, Mystery Absence Link Her in Slaying Of Rich Spinster

Mrs. Frances Thompson, 29, daughter of a former Pittsburgh minister and a Wellesley graduate, was taken to Luzerne County today to face a charge of murder in the slaying of Miss Minnie Dilley, wealthy 74-year-old spinster, found dead in her palatial Forty Fort residence, near Wilkes-Barre.

Maintaining her innocence and inferring that the aged spinster held some mysterious influence over her husband, Carl Thompson, 33, Pittsburgh representative for an eastern lumber firm, Mrs. Thompson could not explain satisfactorily where she had spent the time from Wednesday afternoon to Saturday night. Miss Dilley's battered body was found in her home, on the banks of the Susquehanna River, Saturday. Luzerne County authorities, who came here for Mrs. Thompson, fix

He said the comparison was to be made with samples obtained at Mayview yesterday by the district attorney's office. The grade,

Held Up, Woman Takes Beating to Save Money

Miss Edna Ermlick, 35, manager of the P. H. Butler store at 1800 Jenny Lind street, McKeesport, submitted to a beating from a robber today rather than tell him where the store's money was hidden. The robber departed after taking $15 from the cash register, but without other receipts hidden in the store.

Miss Ermlick was alone when the thug came in and asked for empty boxes. He followed her to a rear room, flashed a revolver, and demanded to know the hiding place of the money.

When she refused to tell, he punched her in the face, and twisted her ears. Then he emptied the register and fled.

Miss Ermlick remained on the job.

FULL PAYMENT OF BONUS PROBABLE AT NEXT CONGRESS

'LOANS' HELP STIMULATE BUSINESS

Dire Predictions Over Vet Plan Fail to Materialize; No Strain on Treasury

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Administration leaders and officials, both in and out of Congress, have about reached the conclusion that they must prepare to pay off the entire soldiers' "bonus" of three and a half billion dollars in the next session of Congress, it was learned today.

The comparative ease with which the government is financing the present loan operations, together with reports that bonus loans have aided retail business and the campaigns of many service organizations, are believed to make full payment probable.

DIRE PREDICTIONS FAIL

Dire predictions made before passage of the bill authorizing an increase in the loan value of adjusted compensation certificates to 50 per cent, have not materialized. Sponsors of the movement also have been surprised at the volume of loan applications.

The outcome, in fact, appears to be a draw as between the Treasury and the proponents of the legislation which caused such bitterness in the recent session and resulted in over-riding of an executive veto.

The Treasury freely predicted the government would be called upon to make more than a billion dollars in loans, while the sponsors of the bill said the amount would range between $400,000,000 and $500,000,000. The Treasury told Congress the bond market would be upset and that business recovery would be retarded.

The latest figures of the Veterans' Bureau show 1,661,628 loan applications on file on which a total of more than $500,000,000 "new money" probably will be loaned. While the peak has been passed, applications are expected to continue steadily until upward of a billion dollars is loaned.

TREASURY NOT AFFECTED

When the new law became effective, $270,965,577 was outstanding in veterans' loans.

Representative McFadden (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, chairman of the House Banking Committee, said the veterans' loans had not affected the Treasury's condition. He declared:

"It appears that borrowings for the loans have not been detrimental to the money market, and the loans have been a stimulant to business through wide distribution.

"I have seen little evidence that the money is being used foolishly as some predicted. For the most part, I believe, it is being spent carefully and wisely."

Representative Hawley (Rep.), of Oregon, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, who opposed the loan bill, said his prediction that loans will exceed a billion dollars is being realized. He believes the question of full cash payment of the veterans' compensation certificates is a far more important question financially for Congress to consider than the present Treasury deficit.

GOUGING DENIED IN PITT FOOD

Mrs. Alice Wilker, manager of the University of Pittsburgh's cafeteria, today denied the charge of Jesse Zizmor that prices charged the students for food are excessive. Zizmor, a student, complained to the student council that the university makes a profit of 1,100 per cent on prunes, which bring 10 cents a dish.

Mrs. Wilker explained that these prunes are sold with cream. What's more, she added, a huge combination sandwich can be had for 25 cents, a big portion of fruit salad for 20 cents, a plate lunch consisting of two slices of meat, potatoes and a vegetable for 30 cents, a slice of bread for 1 penny, a piece of butter for 2 cents and a roll for 3 cents.

A Sun-Telegraph reporter asked five students what they thought of the charges. Each replied that the prices were reasonable and the food good.

The student council decided last night to investigate these charges.

CERMAK SWORN AS MAYOR

CHICAGO, April 9.—(INS.)—Anton J. Cermak, the Bohemian boy who immigrated to America to be a mine worker, was sworn into office today, as Chicago's World Fair mayor, the plaudits of thousands of supporters ringing in his ears.

The oath was administered by Peter J. Brady, newly-elected city clerk, soon after the board of election commissioners announced Cermak had received a majority of 194,257 votes over William Hale Thompson in Tuesday's balloting.

Word went around today that there would be a "clean sweep" at City Hall.

BRITISH KING'S RECOVERY ASSURED

Gradual Improvement in Condition Relieves Fears As to Outcome of Illness

International News Service.

LONDON, April 9.—The recovery of King George from an attack of sub-acute bronchitis, although necessarily slow, was assured today with a gradual improvement in the royal patient's condition.

Warm sunshine, dispelling the chill and mist of the past several days, streamed into his majesty's chamber at Windsor Castle and cheered him considerably.

Aware of the monarch's weakened physical condition since his recent illness, his three physicians nevertheless maintained a close watch over him. He was visited again by Lord Dawson of Penn, Sir Milsom Rees and Dr. Henry Martyn.

Britain, deeply concerned for his majesty's health, was relieved by a statement that the King maintained an improvement indicated early yesterday.

Several members of the royal family at present are visiting at Windsor Castle. The Prince of Wales and Prince George inquired about their father's health by radio telephone from South America, where they are now visiting.

SHORT WEIGHT FINES DROPPED

A. Freeman grocer in Potomac avenue, and Beck's Market, West Liberty avenue, Dormont, each fined $25 recently by Justice of the Peace George Beltzhoover for displaying goods alleged to be underweight, had their fines remitted in County Court today.

The two dealers appealed the fines, and today counsel for the county's Bureau of Weights and Measures, which prosecuted, and counsel for the defendants, agreed to drop the case, there being a technical flaw in the charge. The county inspectors charged the grocers with underweight of a few ounces in 15-pound sacks of potatoes.

Together they succeeded. When she eloped Belasco was furious. He refused to see her and they went their respective ways.

Mrs. Carter disclosed at her home here last night their professional relationship soon was to be resumed.

Weather Conditions.

High barometer overlies the Atlantic Coast states, and the Rocky Mountain and western plains states, separated by a narrow trough of low pressure, which extends from Manitoba southward over the central valleys to Southern Texas. This distribution of pressure is resulting in clear skies over the East and West, with considerable cloudiness over the eastern plains and the central valleys and a belt of showers, extending from Canada southward over the eastern plains to Southern Texas. There was a slight change towards warmer over the states east of the Mississippi and a rather marked change towards colder over the Rocky Mountain states and the western plains. Temperatures of 80 degrees or higher occurred yesterday afternoon over the central plains states and as far east as Indiana.

River Conditions.

Melting snow in the mountains of West Virginia and Southern Pennsylvania is causing a slight rise in the upper tributaries of the Monongahela River. Elsewhere the rivers are falling. Stage at Franklin is 6.1; Lock No. 7, 14.5; Pittsburgh, 16.1; Dam No. 4, 13.9; Dam No. 8, 14.8; Dam No. 10, 16.4, and Dam No. 13, 17.9. The rivers will continue to fall.

GEN. BUTLER DINES WITH GRUNDY

Political Significance in Affair Denied; Marine's 'Hat' Not Yet in Ring

International News Service.

BRISTOL, Pa., April 9.—Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, commandant of the Marine Corps base at Quantico, Va., who admits he would like to be a United States Senator, dined here last night with former U. S. Senator Joseph R. Grundy, it was learned today.

State Senator Clarence J. Buckman and Lieut. Col. Fred Taylor Pusey, of Delaware county, also attended the dinner at the home of Stanford E. Rynyan, a Bristol manufacturer. It was denied there was any significance to the affair and Grundy declined to discuss the possibility of Gen Butler's candidacy.

The General revealed he did not know what Gov. Gifford Pinchot's sentiments might be towards a "Butler-for-senator" campaign.

Butler, earlier in the day, had repeated his assertion that he had not thrown his hat into the political ring, but added:

"When I retire from the Marine Corps, around the middle of September, my future plans will be formed. There is nothing to stop me from seeking the nomination in the 1932 primary if, after consideration, I decide that it is the thing I want to do."

BURKE PRAISES LONGWORTH

Attorney James Francis Burke, of Pittsburgh, counsel for the Republican party's national committee, today issued this statement:

"The country has lost one of its most useful public servants and I have lost one of the rarest friends and companions of a lifetime.

"At no time in the legislative history of the country was Mr. Longworth a more important figure in preserving harmony in the House of Representatives and sustaining the dominance of the Republican party than now.

"His death is one of the most untimely strokes of fate from which the capital has suffered in many years.

"He was the one man in the House of whom Republicans and Democrats alike felt certain they could unite upon for the speakership next December, without leaving an intensely partisan bitterness as an aftermath.

"Nick was not only a finished parliamentarian and an earnest student of legislation, but one of the greatest moderators that ever presided over the House. In fact, his moderation was the great secret of his success.

"I was sitting with President Hoover in his study on Tuesday evening when the message came that the Speaker had been stricken with pneumonia. We were both shocked and the President himself emphasized his apprehension and how untimely it all was.

"Mr. Longworth and I sat side by side for 10 years in the House and we had been bosom friends ever since. The last time he visited Pittsburgh he was my house guest. He had a host of friends in this city who will greviously mourn his departure."

Seances Fakes, Declares Conan Doyle's 'Mystic'

NEW YORK, April 9.—(AP.)—Asserting that "people want to be fooled" and that for 11 years he had done just that, Nino Pecararo, "mystic" whom the late Sir Arthur Conan Doyle admitted won him over to spiritualism, last night declared his seances were "all a fake." He said:

"I've never seen a ghost and don't believe anyone else ever has. I'm sick and tired of giving seances and having spiritualism reap the profit. When ghosts appear at my seances they are Nino Pecararo in the flesh."

He allowed himself to be securely bound, then freed himself and wrote two messages. One was "from Doyle" and the other "from Houdini." The handwriting compared favorably with authetic originals of the famous men.

In addition Pecararo passed on two "messages" from dead persons to newspapermen present and also had "ghost hands" play an accordion.

The demonstration was given in the apartment of Joseph Dunninger, chairman of a committee named by a scientific magazine to expose fake spiritualists. Dunninger said more than $5,000,000 was spent annually in New York alone on spiritualistic work.

He added:

"Conan Doyle had implicit faith in Nino and wrote that spiritualism rises or falls by him."

Coolidge Hails Michelson As Benefactor of Mankind

NEW YORK, April 9.

To the Editor of The Sun-Telegraph:

One of the greatest men in our country in the realm of pure science is Dr. Albert A. Michelson. Yet few of us could recall his accomplishments. If he held a similar place in applied science he would be as well known as Edison. He is the world authority on light.

Mr. Coolidge

Graduating at the United States Naval Academy in 1873, where he taught for a short time before studying abroad, his investigations have continued through nearly half a century. His success brought him many prizes and medals, among which was the Nobel Prize for physics awarded in 1907. For the past 39 years he has been connected with the University of Chicago.

Now at the age of 79 he is making new experiments to check his former estimate of the velocity of light. The labor involved has left him exhausted and ill, but still courageously directing the work through assistants. The greater the mind of a man the more it seeks for the exact truth. The kind of service such men give not only affects our daily lives through useful inventions but by increasing the sum of human knowledge raises humanity to a higher plane.

BLOW TO CAPITAL

WASHINGTON, April 9.—(AP.)—The death of Speaker Longworth came as a sudden blow today to official Washington. Word spread quickly over the Capital, where he had been known and liked for more than a quarter of a century; expressions of regret were spontaneous.

Flags on the Capitol were half-staffed 15 minutes after his death.

HOOVER SENDS AIDE

President Hoover, upon learning of the death of Longworth ordered Col. Campbell B. Hodges, his military aide, to leave for Aiken at once by airplane to assist Mrs. Longworth in any way possible.

The news swept rapidly through a capitol still crowded with holiday visitors. Tourists passed the word from mouth to mouth along the crowded corridors.

News of the end was received in the Speaker's office by a force that had kept a vigil since Monday.

Miss Mildred Reeves, secretary to the Speaker and his employe for 15 years, heard the word from the White House by telephone. A moment later a representative walked in and asked:

"Is there anything I can do, Mildred?"

She answered:

"Not a thing."

She turned then to answer one of two telephones that had been ringing continuously all morning.

MRS. LONGWORTH BRAVE

Mrs. Lucille McArthur, a member of the staff, said Mrs. Longworth took the blow bravely. Speaking of her repeated telephone calls with Mrs. Longworth as Aiken, Mrs. McArthur said:

"She was just wonderful."

The Speaker was ill when he left last Monday. Mrs. Longworth telephoned the Speaker's physician on Monday morning. On Tuesday afternoon she told the woman in the office he had bronchial pneumonia.

Thence-forward they knew the illness was very serious.

When Miss Reeves telephoned Mrs. Longworth last night the connection was broken. Mrs. Longworth, she said, took the trouble to call back and inform her of the Speaker's condition.

Longworth's Life Spent In Politics; Married 'Princess Alice'

WASHINGTON, April 9.—(INS.)—Nicholas Longworth, or "Nick," as he was known by everybody from newsboy to President, was a popular and colorful figure in American politics for more than a quarter of a century. His youthful tastes and demeanor belied his age. Everybody regarded "Nick" as young, and so he was in spirit, although he passed his sixty-first birthday last November.

His whole adult life was spent in politics. It was his life.

The unhappiest two years that "Nick" ever spent, he often told friends, were those immediately after the Democratic sweep in 1912. In that tempestuous year his father-in-law's split of the Republican party occasioned his defeat for Congress. Save for that one term, he had served continuously in Congress since 1903, and during his last three terms he was speaker.

ADVANCE STEADY

"Nick" started early to carve out a political career. Born of wealthy and socially prominent parents in Cincinnati in 1869, he did not have to fight his way upward as so many other politicians have done. He advanced, rather, by easy stages and without much friction.

After graduating from Harvard at the age of 22, he spent several years studying law and then got his first taste of public office as a member of the Cincinnati School Board at the age of 29. The next year, at 30, he was elected to the Ohio House of Representatives. One term in the Lower House of the Legislature and he stepped into the State Senate. One term there, and he stepped on to Congress.

His wealth, his social background, but most of all his genial personality and some real ability, made advancement easy. He made his bow to Washington as a fledgling Congressman in 1903. The girl he was to marry, then already beginning to be known as "Princess Alice," was then in the White House.

FAMOUS ROMANCE

The courtship of Nicholas Longworth and Alice Roosevelt was one of the romances of American history. They were married on February 17, 1906, just three years after Nick had come to Washington. That marriage probably attained more publicity than any other in American society. Newspapers carried thousands of columns of it, and from all over the world came gifts and best wishes to the happy couple.

Their home in Washington became the center of society and politics. If Washington had anything approaching a salon, in the European sense, it was the Longworth establishment. There the leaders of society and the leaders of politics gathered regularly and often. It is probably safe to say that every man prominent in the politics of the last quarter century passed through the Longworth drawing rooms, irrespective of party. Nick's popularity and Alice's wit and charm combined to form an irresistible magnet.

Until 1912 their life flowed along like a story-book romance. Then Theodore Roosevelt bolted the Republican party and led that flaming revolt which resulted in Woodrow Wilson's gaining the White House. Nick was defeated in that year. Even the loyal and rock-ribbed Republican First District of Ohio could not withstand the terrific schism caused by the Progressive revolt.

RETURNED TO HOUSE

But two years later, in 1914, he returned jauntily to his seat, to remain thereafter until death claimed him. Nick and Alice just picked up where they left off in 1912, and again their home became the meeting place of fashionable and influential Washington.

In the Sixty-eighth Congress he was chosen Republican floor leader. He had been one of the influential assistants for some years before. After one term as leader, he was chosen Speaker of the next Congress—a position to which he had long aspired, and one which he regarded as the most important in the American political system, next to the presidency. The rights and prerogatives of the speakership never had a more zealous defender than Nick.

Ultimately, it was this regard for the dignity and prerogatives of the speakership, and that of his wife's as well, that led to one of the most amusing social feuds in the history of Washington—the "Alice and Dolly" feud. It concerned the seating precedence at social functions of the wife of the Speaker and the "official hostess" of the Vice President, who happened to be Mrs. Dolly Gann, half-sister of Vice President Curtis. Rather than give in, each avoided attending social functions at which the other was to be present.

CAPABLE LEADER

Nick Longworth had a real flair for politics. Witty, charming and eloquent, he also had a real capacity for government. His friends used to say that it was unfortunate that the publicity attending his courtship and marriage rather tended to place him in the public mind as "the son-in-law" of a great President, rather than as a legislator and politician in his own right. His best work in Congress was done in committee and in the compromising of seemingly impossible situations.

PAULINA 'PAL' OF LONGWORTH

WASHINGTON, April 9.—(AP.)—The House lost a speaker today, but Paulina Longworth mourned her "daddy."

The flaxen-haired 6-year-old daughter of the Speaker and granddaughter of President Roosevelt, was in Cincinnati, miles from her father's bedside awaiting his coming for a promised vacation together.

Miss Paulina and Mr. Longworth were real pals. No demands warranted an interference in their plans together, and on several occasions she was a delighted observer in the House gallery or on the floor beside her proud parent.

Only recently an important visitor sought an engagement with the speaker on a certain afternoon. He was told it was impossible. He said:

"My daughter is participating in a children's play. I could not afford to miss that."

Longworth Death Removes Owner Of 'Our Car'

WASHINGTON, April 9.—(AP.)—"Our car" now is just a governmental automobile.

Furnished for the use of the Speaker of the House, the limousine Nicholas Longworth used for six years will have no owner until the next presiding officer is chosen.

To Democratic Leader Garner it was always "our car." The Texan is his party's candidate for the speakership and he seldom missed an opportunity to tell "Nick" jokingly: "It will soon be all mine."

It's no longer "our," but the closely divided House will decide whether it is to become Garner's.

Genial 'Nick' Longworth Mourned in Capital For Humaneness

WASHINGTON, April 9.—(AP.)—Under the mourning for Speaker Longworth there was deeper grief in the capital today for the genial "Nick," who was what Representative McDuffie, of Alabama, called "a natural human being."

McDuffie, the Democratic whip, wrote the Speaker just a few days ago:

"There are a lot of Republicans we could do without, but you are not one of them."

The tribute went with hope for quick recovery from the cold that became fatal pneumonia.

It was the "Nick" of such incidents who received first tributes up and down the Capitol. It was he who is said to have inspired Democratic Leader Garner, of Texas, to refer, once, to "about 200 Longworth votes," which concededly depended upon the decision of the Speaker.

WARM PERSONALITY

He was a big man, this "Nick." He was bald and ruddy-faced, uncommonly healthy. His clothes and the handsome cane he carried were those of the wealth and position to which he was born. "Nick's" voice was as smooth as his hands, except when he was hoarse from colds, to which he was subject.

When this man greeted anyone, he smiled; and his directness was the same with the messengers to whom he invariably nodded in the House lobby, as with the titled European he would welcome to his home in flawless French. The evenness of his temper was traditional. So was his capacity for fraternal good will in politics.

Not long ago the music magazine, "Etude," asked the speaker, in a symposium, what composition he would choose to hear, if he could, when he was dying. Longworth chose Beethoven's Seventh Symphony. He was an accomplished violinist and a pianist.

DOOR EVER OPEN

Newspapermen were the speaker's friends and he was theirs. Through his ever open door they passed singly and in groups, confident he would answer their questions directly or explain why not. On him they depended, often, for implied "steers" that served in predicting dubious outcomes of controversies.

The success of Longworth's leadership lay in his ability to sense the temper of the membership.

He was by native political philosophy a regular Republican. But his spectacular defection on the veterans' loan bill which he supported last session was a demonstration that his party loyalty was not abject.

GIFT FOR PHRASES

In many touchy incidents did Longworth as Speaker preserve the proprieties. A gift for phrases served him well. His Harvard training made his rulings from the rostrum, however technical, a delight to hear.

The story his associates told today around the Capitol was that of a man born "with a silver spoon in his mouth" who went to work and for six years occupied what he was always proud to call "the greatest office in any legislative branch of any government in the world"—the speakership in the House of Representatives.

SLAYER OF WIFE TRIES SUICIDE

Paul Crissman, 28, who slashed his throat, police say, after killing his wife, Minnie Crissman, 25, in their third-floor apartment at 923 Irwin avenue, North Side, probably will recover, physicians in Allegheny General Hospital reported today.

Crissman, according to police, cut his wife's throat with a razor when he learned she was going to take their two children and leave for the home of her sister in Indianapolis. Their two children—Mary, 3, and Paul, 2—were in the room when the tragedy occurred.

Crissman, taken to the hospital, admitted, according to Homicide Detectives Frank R. Morgan and John Riley, that he had killed his wife because of domestic trouble. He lost a position as janitor in the North Side four weeks ago.

The youngest of the Crissman children, its neck slightly dislocated, apparently when Mrs. Crissman was attacked while she was holding him, was taken to Allegheny General Hospital. The girl was being cared for by other roomers in the house. The dead woman was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Chambers, of New Harmony, Ind.

The body of the woman was identified at the morgue last night by a brother, Henry Chambers, of rural route New Kensington, who will claim it today.

Chance Decides Ship For Claire Windsor

NEW YORK, April 9.—(AP.)—Claire Windsor, screen actress, who retired about two years ago, became restless the other day and decided to go somewhere. So she shut her eyes and jabbed a pin into a list of ships and found it had punctured "Mauretania."

Anyway, that was Miss Windsor's explanation for sailing on the Mauretania. She said she would visit London and Paris and expects to return to pictures when she comes back in the fall.

Girl Sent Back To Gumbert Home

Lucy Smith, 17, who escaped from the Gumbert Home, was sent back today by Magistrate Thomas D. Jones in Morals Court. Peter Cukunda, 42, in whose home in Lockhart street the girl had been living, was fined $25. Cukunda asserted the girl's mother was a friend of his wife.

HOOVER, NATION LAUD SPEAKER

His passing is a loss to the nation."

Shortly after the news of the speaker's death was flashed to the world, messages of condolence poured in from all over the globe to Mrs. Longworth.

Among the statements issued were these:

JAMES J. DAVIS, of Pennsylvania—The House of Representative has lost a fair and consistent presiding officer and the party an able exponent of its principles.

GIFFORD PINCHOT, of Pennsylvania—Washington will never be the same without him. His death will be deplored by hundreds of thousands who never saw him but to whom his genial character and his high efficiency as Speaker are intimately known.

JOHN N. GARNER, Texas Congressman, Democratic Leader of the House—He was my closest and best loved friend. It is a great loss to the country.

CHARLES CURTIS, Vice President—The sudden illness and death of Speaker Longworth was a great shock to all who knew him. In his passing, the House has lost a distinguished and able Speaker. The country has lost a faithful legislator. His name is indelibly inscribed in the pages of our nation's history. The nation mourns with his wife and family.

ALFRED E. SMITH, former governor of New York—I hear with great regret of the death of Speaker Longworth. For years he has been a prominent and commanding figure in our national public life. His loss will be mourned by hosts of friends throughout the United States.

ROBERT F. WAGNER, New York Senator—I am greatly shocked by the news of Speaker Longworth's death. His passing into the great beyond is an immeasurable loss to the nation.

JOHN W. DAVIS, former Democratic candidate for President—His passing is a loss to the country, to the Congress and to a host of friends. In his long life of public service, there is much to commend, nothing to regret.

SIMEON D. FESS, Ohio Senator—The nation mourns the death of one of its distinguished citizens. Speaker Longworth has made a place for himself that extended beyond the realm of public interest.

Longworth's Sister, Ill in Tunis, Told

PARIS, April 9.—(AP.)—News of the death of Nicholas Longworth was received in Tunis by his sister, Clara, whose husband, Gen. De Chambrun, is commander of the French expeditionary forces and one of the high officials of the French government.

Madame De Chambrun received the news of her brother's death confined to a sick bed where she has been ill for a month with bronchitis.

Minister Tightens Rules, Marriages Drop 50 Pct.

NEW YORK, April 9.—(AP)—Marriages have fallen off nearly 50 per cent at Grace Church since the rector, Dr. W. Russell Bowie, "tightened" the requirements.

Dr. Bowie noted that the slump had taken place since he began requiring newlyweds to sign an agreement that the tie would actually bind and also that the couple join a church.

North Sider Dies At Lodge Meeting

James P. Rodgers, 70, of 513 Sandusky street, fell dead last night while attending a meeting of the Independent Order of Americans at 905 Federal street. Acute indigestion was the cause of death.

STEUBENRACH BACK ON FORCE

Herman Steubenrauch, former prohibition agent, ex-Citizen League investigator and undercover man for Police Superintendent Peter P. Walsh, is back on the force again. Hailed before the Police Trial Board on numerous occasions for slugging and shooting frays, Steubenrauch has been reinstated after each escapade.

Police records now show that Steubenrauch is a sub patrolman at the Mt. Washington station. Steubenrauch was first fired from the force in January, 1925, for a fracas with another patrolman in a North Side saloon. He was reinstated in July, 1926. During his absence from the force he worked for several months as a prohibition agent.

During the Citizens League crusade he worked as an investigator for the league, at the same time keeping his job on the force as undercover man for the superintendent.

Newlywed Count Plants Oak, Hope Of Royalists

PALERMO, Italy, April 9.—(AP)—A little oak tree planted by the Count of Paris on soil brought from France, symbolized today the royalist movement, which its supporters hope some day will restore the throne to France.

The ceremony was performed in a park at the Villa d'Aumale, owned by the count's father, the Duke of Guise, shortly after his marriage yesterday to Princess Isabelle of Orleans and Braganee.

The bride tore her veil to shreds to make souvenirs for her friends before she departed on her honeymoon.

Estranged Wife Leaps to Death

LOS ANGELES, April 9.—(AP.)—Mrs. Anna L. Wilson, 33, estranged wife of Charles R. Wilson, county motorcycle officer, leaped to her death from the eighth floor of a downtown office building yesterday.

quality, quantity and price is to be checked.

TAKE PHOTOGRAPHS

Attorney Earl R. Reed, of the Citizens Committee, revealed today that photographic evidence, of a nature which was not disclosed, had been obtained during a visit at Mayview yesterday following the action on the part of the district attorney's office. He was accompanied by auditors of Main & Co., who said the inmates of Mayview had evidenced considerable interest in the proceedings, and had followed them from place to place.

Samples of foodstuffs delivered by the L. H. Parke Company during the years of 1929 and 1930 have been requested by Attorney Colvin, who said that he intended to make the comparison himself. He said that he was thoroughly familiar with the grocery trade, his parents and grandparents having been engaged in that business since 1742. The comparison is to be made not only with samples obtained yesterday at Mayview, but with those which are to be received from other merchants. The prices will be compared with brokers' lists which have been furnished his office, he said.

GOES AFTER FACTS

Attorney Colvin said:

"We have been working quietly in organizing the entire procedure in order to get the facts, and I have them.

"The Citizens Committee, the League of Women Voters, Henry Oliver Evans, county detectives and other officers of the district attorney's office have been enlisted in the cause and are cooperating in the efforts being made."

The canned goods to be subjected to comparison are said to have been purchased by former Director B. L. Succop without bids. The law requiring competitive bidding was apparently evaded by dividing the order into lots costing less than $500.

LANG IN CONFERENCE

President John S. Herron, of City Council; Director Lang and Attorney Beatty conferred for more than three hours behind locked doors in Director Lang's office, maping plans for Lang's answer to Attorney Evans' charges against the department on Monday. Although Director Lang admitted his answer had been discussed at the conference, he did not disclose what went on.

Evans has said that he has definite proof of fraud connected with the inspectors in the department. How soon he will make public his evidence is uncertain, as he now insists upon a reply from the engineers before he touches collusion. Following this testimony he plans to complete his case by calling to the stand a number of city inspectors.

GAIN REPORTED IN PITTBURGH BUS TRAFFIC

House Utilities Probers Advised of 20 Per Cent Growth; P. S. C. Assailed

HARRISBURG, April 9.—The Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company enjoyed a 20 per cent increase in passenger traffic in 1929 over the previous year, it was testified at the Moore committee investigating utilities today.

The figures, 2,769,033 passengers in 1928 and the jump to 3,332,506 in 1929, formed a simple statement in a general bus hearing, in which the conditions of the state bus lines were summarized.

The charge that the Public Service Commission makes special concessions to the Pennsylvania General Transit Company, bus subsidiary of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, was made by James F. Crowl, bus transportation expert.

ASSAILS BENN

Crowl, formerly employed by the P. G. T. and the Public Service Commission, appeared as another of the experts employed by Gov. Pinchot to assist the committee in its inquiry into public utilities and the commission. He also named Commissioner James S. Benn as having granted the Pennsylvania Railroad subsidiary rights to operate at Philadelphia and Scranton which had previously been refused to independent operators.

'NOT A CHANCE'

H. D. Sheppard, of Hanover, testified that when an independent Hanover company asked for a certificate, Chairman of the Public Service Commission W. D. B. Ainey stated straightforwardly that there wasn't a chance.

ASPINWALL RATES

The committee was to hear witnesses testify concerning the water company which serves Aspinwall and contiguous districts late today.

Rates, valuations and other facts concerning Western Pennsylvania utility concerns may follow the Aspinwall case to supplement the sensational testimony of yesterday, in which Philadelphia's rapid transit official, Coleman T. Joyce, was charged with usurping the Public Service Commission's authority in motor bus monopolies in the eastern city.

Joyce and Public Service Commissioner James S. Benn and Russel Wolfe, Philadelphia examiner for the commission, will be called later to testify as to the transit company's methods in

House Votes Down Short 'Ballot' Plan

HARRISBURG, April 9.—(AP.)—Foes of the administration claimed a victory in the defeat in the House of the Moore resolution to permit the electorate to pass on a constitutional amendment to make possible a "short ballot" in connection with the adoption of voting machines.

The design was to make minor officials now on the ballot appointive. Representative Sowers, Philadelphia, opposed the bill as a blow at home rule. The vote was 88 noes and 79 ayes.

Mental Care Cost Measure Assailed

HARRISBURG, April 9.—(AP.)—Representative Staudenmeier, Schuylkill, last night in the House assailed the bill of Representative Mathay, Philadelphia, which would empower the state to assess against property of relatives the cost of maintaining feeble-minded persons in state institutions.

Mathay said he had introduced the bill at the request of the Department of Justice. Staudenmeier declared care of such unfortunates is the inherent duty of the state and criticized any attempt to avoid it.

Lewis Opens Bids On Heidelberg Span

HARRISBURG, April 9.—Samuel S. Lewis, secretary of highways, today opened bids for construction of a bridge and a stretch of road in Heidelberg Borough, Allegheny County. The lowest bid submitted was that of Melvin E. Lutz, of Canton, O., at $135,094.95.

The stretch of road is on Route 108, and its length is little more than one-fifth of a mile. The bridge, to span Chartiers Creek, is to be of structural steel and reinforced concrete.

Dairy Firm Here Granted Charter

HARRISBURG, April 9.—(AP.)—The State Department announced today a charter had been granted to the Ohio Grand Dairy Company, Coraopolis, Pa., with a capitalization of $300,000. Charles W. Duff, Coraopolis, is treasurer of the company, which manufactures and deals in ice cream and dairy products. Other incorporators are Ellsworth Jordan, of Coraopolis, and E. J. Stein, Pittsburgh.

Wilmerding in Tears As Ammonia Escapes

Escaping ammonia gas brought tears to the eyes of several hundred Westinghouse employes at noon today when fumes from a broken line in the basement of the Independent Meat Market, 218 Westinghouse avenue, flooded streets in the vicinity. No one was overcome. Masked Wilmerding firemen shut off the escaping fumes.

Champion

SAM STARKEY

BLIND BOY TOPS GRID STAR

Eddie Baker, football and basketball captain at Pitt, may have been an A No. 1 strategian on the gridiron and the basketball court, but it took a blind lad to beat him at checkers.

The Panther star was a patient at St. Francis Hospital last week, having his tonsils and adenoids removed and his nose, battered and bruised in a gridiron encounter, straightened. On the same floor as Eddie was Sam Starkey, of 911 Chester avenue, Avalon, a blind patient. Sam can play checkers, using a specially designed board. His victims had been the nurses and doctors of the St. Francis staff.

Sam learned that the famous Pitt star was on the same floor and expressed a desire to meet him. His nurse went into a huddle with Eddie's nurse and as a result, the lads met.

Sam and Eddie played on Sam's specially designed board. Half the counters are square, the others being round, so that Sam can distinguish them. There are small pegs to be inserted for kings. The squares are inset. Sam said:

"Eddie is a great fella. It was mighty nice of him to put in his time playing with me. Yep, I beat him, but he's a pretty good player at that and a great guy to know."

SUIT ON LIGHT RATES HERE ORDERED

Governor Employs Expert For Preparation of Bill Against Duquesne Company

preparation of rate cases. I have asked Maj. Pike to study the Pittsburgh situation in the light of recent developments and to advise me as to the possible base for a rate case."

"Maj. Pike was the principal consulting engineer in the only rate case that has ever been brought against the Philadelphia Electric Company on behalf of the electric consumers of that city. He occupied the same position in the case which the city of Pittsburgh brought against the Duquesne Light Company. That case resulted in lowering the company's charges to the consumers by $600,000 a year.

SEES CHANGE IN LAW

"I want to be prepared to act when a change in the law, the abolition of the Public Service Commission, and the creation of a Fair Rate Board gives me a chance.

"The annual report of the Duquesne Light Company for 1930, filed with the Public Service Commission, is or will be available, so the time is ripe for a study of the rates charged by this company with the special purpose of saving money to the consumers.

"I congratulate the people of Pittsburgh that Maj. Pike has consented to take up this work. He has been constantly employed by public and private agencies interested in the utilities situation. No man whom I could secure is better equipped or more competent to perform this service for the citizens of the second largest city in Pennsylvania.

"Negotiations are under way to get the same preparatory work done for a rate case against the Philadelphia Electric Company in order to relieve the rate payers of Philadelphia."

RAPS 'OVERCHARGE'

An annual overcharge amounting to $500,000,000 is being paid by electrical consumers for distribution of electric current, Gov. Pinchot charged.

The charge was made in a letter sent by the Governor to William S. Lee, of New York, president of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers. It was sent in reply to one from Lee, written February 7, in which the electrical expert said collection of data on costs of distribution lay outside the field of his organization.

Based on available reports for 1929, the average cost to the ordinary lighting consumer was 5.96 cents per kilowatt hour for electricity, the Governor's letter said, while the industrial consumer paid but 1.35 cents per kilowatt hour. This, he declared, was too large a difference to be covered by cost of distributing current from substations. The Governor asserted

"As a matter of fact, reports of a large number of typical American companies indicate the actual cost of distribution of some 20,400,000 kilowatt hours of electricity annually to lighting customers is on the average about 1½ cents per kilowatt hour."

Mother of 3 Arrested In Spinster's Death

the time of the slaying as Friday morning.

MINISTER'S DAUGHTER

Mrs. Thompson, former teacher in the Latimer Junior High School, lived with her husband and three children at 1920 Fifth avenue. She is the daughter of the Rev. F. T. Galpin, former pastor of the First Baptist Church, Bellefield avenue and Bayard street. The father, according to reports, has left the ministry and is living in Hempstead, L. I.

Questioned by County Detective Chief George Murren and two Luzerne County officials, Assistant District Attorney D. O. Coughlin and County Detective John J. Dempsey, Mrs. Thompson said she left her home Wednesday, leaving the children at a boarding house, because she learned her husband had made arrangements to have her sent to an insane asylum in New York.

Mrs. Thompson for the past three years has suffered from hallucinations, according to her husband, and Chief Murren, after talking to the woman, declared he believed her to be mentally unbalanced.

OFFERS ALIBI

She said she spent the time chiefly in walking the downtown streets looking for employment, going to the Pennsylvania Railroad Station at night. Thompson visited county detective headquarters shortly after Luzerne County authorities had departed with his wife. He talked with Chief Murren, denying that he had made plans for the removal of his wife to an institution. He was unable to explain her movements from Wednesday until Saturday. He said she left him a note saying she had taken the children on a trip and for him not to worry. He did not know where she had been.

Assistant District Attorney Coughlin, of Luzerne County, said they had learned that Mrs. Thompson had resented criticism of Miss Dilley over her housekeeping abilities when she lived in Wilkes-Barre. A neighbor of Miss Dilley, he also said, had seen a woman in the vicinity of the slain woman's home answering the description of Mrs. Thompson.

TELL OF LETTERS

Mrs. Thompson had written Miss Dilley many letters, Coughlin said, accusing the dead woman of having wielded some "influence" over her husband. Mrs. Thompson, questioned about the letters, told detectives Miss Dilley wanted her husband to head a "love cult" made up of school teachers in Wilkes-Barre.

Attorney Louise M. McBride, who said she represented the Wellesley Alumni Association in Pittsburgh, visited Mrs. Thompson for a few minutes before she was taken back to Wilkes-Barre.

Heroic Dog Slain, But Bandit Also Loses Life

CHICAGO, April 9.—(AP.)—Bucky, Charles Nieft's police dog, was slain, but in dying Bucky also brought death to a holdup man.

Thrice before the dog had routed robbers from his owner's store. He knew what to do. So when Nieft shouted "Get 'em, Bucky," as two robbers held him at bay, he leaped with bared fangs.

Bucky died in midair as one of the robbers fired, but the momentary distraction permitted Nieft to seize a gun and shoot one of the robbers dead while the other fled. The slain man was not identified.

Contract Awarded For Prison Work

HARRISBURG, April 9.—(AP.)—The Department of Properties and Supplies awarded the following contracts for construction and installations at state institutions:

Pittsburgh—Des Moines Steel Company, of Pittsburgh, steel water tank and riser for the Western State Penitentiary at Pittsburgh, $6,800.

George W. Weller, Montgomery, grading at the State Industrial Home for Women, Muncy, $7,740.

Hall Brothers, Jeannette, heating service lines at the Cresson State Sanatorium for Tuberculosis, $7,865.

ANTI-BLUE LAW FIGHT SHIFTS

HARRISBURG, April 9.—(AP.)—The scene of battle on modification of the Sunday blue laws of 1794 has been shifted from the House Committee on Law and Order to its Committee on Elections.

While the Law and Order Committee was killing a dozen measures sponsored by Philadelphia members to modify the blue law, a close battle was being waged in the Elections Committee on indefinitely postponing consideration of the Denning bill to permit counties local option on Sunday professional baseball. The motion to postpone action indefinitely carried by 13 votes to 12 with six members absent.

After polling the absent members, modificationists indicated they would make another effort to obtain favorable action.

Fake Rug Sales Come Under Fire

The Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce has been notified that canvassers are selling rugs in Pennsylvania which they falsely represent as made by blind workers, it was announced today by G. H. Dennison, of the chamber, who requests that any information of similar activity in Pittsburgh be reported to him.

Slayer of Villa Gets Challenge To Duel

MEXICO CITY, April 9.—(AP.)—Jesus Salas Barraza, head of the gang that slew Pancho Villa in 1923, was challenged to a duel by Damian Gonzalez Vasquez, who was one of Villa's staff. The leter of the challenger was published in the press here.

Gonzalez rejects the recent statement of Salas that it was a noble act to kill Villa since he was the "greatest assassin Mexico has known." The challenger declares his fallen leader was one of the country's greatest "patriots."

Three Bond Issues Approved By State

HARRISBURG, April 9.—(AP.)—Three bond issues were approved by Secretary of Internal Affairs James F. Woodward. They were:

Lawrence County—Ellport Borough School District, $4,000, for paying indebtedness to Ellwood City School District for high school tuition.

Adams County—Hamiltonban Township School District, $7,000, for refunding existing indebtedness.

EXTRA SESSION PAY RAISE FAILS

HARRISBURG, April 9.—A bill to increase from $500 to $1,500 the salary of members of the General Assembly for special sessions was defeated last night in the House, 70 to 54. Proponents numbered less than the required constitutional majority.

The measure was sponsored by Representative Green, Philadelphia, and supported in speeches by Representatives Sowers and Green, Philadelphia, and Representative Musmanno, Allegheny. Representative Peelor, Indiana, led the brief opposition.

Sowers declared "bricklayers work less hours than we do and get more pay." Musmanno said the increase to $1,500 was "not sufficient" and ought to be further increased to make the cost of extra sessions "prohibitive," thus forcing all legislative activities into the regular sessions.

Gunman Gets $27 In Store Holdup

The P. H. Butler store, at 3801 Penn avenue, was held up by an armed man who rifled the cash register of $27 last night. John Murdoch, the manager, of 6629 Shetland avenue, was alone in the store.

ROAD PROGRAM FACES THREAT

HARRISBURG, April 9.—(AP.)—A warning of trouble ahead for the administration highway program has been sounded in the House of Representatives.

Representative Turner, Delaware, moved yesterday that the omnibus road bill, under which the state will take over 20,000 miles of township roads, be made a special order of business for 10 p. m. Monday, April 20. The motion carried.

Representative Bidelspacher, Lycoming, sponsor of the bill and chairman of the House Roads Committee, later asked Representative Turner if he would not amend his motion to bring the bill up earlier and avoid the two weeks' delay. Representative Turner agreed, and it was expected the omnibus bill would be considered on final passage next Tuesday instead of a week later.

Members who supported the Turner motion said that they wanted information from the Department of Highways on the probable cost of maintenance of the 20,000 miles proposed to be taken over before they approve the Bidelspacher bill.

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

(Copyright, 1931, by Daily Mirror.)

Portrait of a Man Talking to Himself

Jimmy Walker's predicament proved one thing, at any rate. That Mr. and Mrs. General Public, like a fight crowd at the Garden, enjoy witnessing a sizzling mixup, but invariably embrace the one who is getting the worst of it. . . . Nearly everywhere you go now you note evidence that Jim has the crowd with him again. . . . At the theater the other night, when one of the actors remarked that he thought Walker was out front, the capacity attendance broke out into machine-gun tempoed applause. . . . The shots of him in the newsreels arouse more sincere handclapping than the President entices. . . . Even renowned newspapermen confess that their harsh comments have brought numerous complaints from subscribers who are "fed up." . . . Some of the rags have switched already—and offer sugary editorial comment. . . . Walker, they thought, would lose his head and explode and say things that would make him a larger target—but he remains the calmest of the lot. . . . His comforters should remind him how Babe Ruth went through a long stretch of front page humiliation—only to remain baseball's outstanding hero. . . . Didn't the rags take Henry Ford into court and try to prove him a boob? . . . Ford remains the No. 1 man in his field, anyhow. . . . Tunney whipped Dempsey twice. . . . But ask the man in the street who is champ?

I must tell Jack Lait about George W. Hill, the boy president of the American Tobacco group. . . . Jack could do a feature on him for the Sunday mag section. . . . Hill is the genius who lifted the firm's stock so high they rewarded him with a million-dollar bonus. . . . And what a kid. . . . His chief pastime is leading B. A. Rolfe's Lucky Strike Orchestra in the broadcasting studios. . . . Roger Wolfe Kahn strained at the tribal leash for the same reason—to wield a baton—and play leader. . . . You keep being a boy when you have a pastime or even time to enjoy having one. . . . What a contrast some of the wealthy fellows are to the wealthy loafers you see boiled every night in the sin-spots—squandering coin that someone else perspired for. . . . Last night, frixample: At one table a chap who never labored an hour in his life bought alleged wine for $25 a half pitcher full. . . . He ordered four of them, at least.

There ought to be a good audience for "The End of the World," that new book to which so many World stars contributed. . . . Page 221 is simply ducky. . . . Eva Tanguay says that that Vth Ave. jeweler is using her name, and that she hasn't peddled her stones. . . . Well, if that "Skippy" flicker doesn't make the toughest guy cry, then he isn't human. . . . Wonder why that gal in Brooklyn who wants to sell her body after death for $100 to a medical crowd wants the coin? . . . You hear more sob stuff in this racket than judges hear, I'll bet. . . . Wonder who "Rosalie" is? . . . The one who writes that she served in an "entertainer" capacity girl and is wasting away because she hasn't the necessary coin to take the dope cure? . . . If she really wants the cure she can apply at Welfare Island.

Texas Guinan has taken greater risks, at that. . . . Perhaps her visit to Paris will be the innovation she thinks it will be. . . . Her night club will resemble a Western barroom. . . . Her cuties will be cowgirls, with chaps, spurs, sombreros, etc. . . . And Tex will go to work each midnight on a white horse! . . . "Like Godiva?" I asked her. . . . "No," she said, "I'm not that old-fashioned." . . . But, unless she does, I cannot see how novel it will be to the Frenchies. . . . So accustomed are they to having their show girls parade about in the Eve manner. . . . The glamor of First Nights, I guess, never will fade. . . . No matter how indifferent you think you are to them—there always seems to be a person at them you've heard and wondered about. . . . And that is what keeps you interested. . . . Between curtains, I mean. . . . And even when the asbestos is up—the "actors" in the audience sometimes are funnier. . . . and louder!

The hotel restaurant business is shot to bits, and they attribute it to the speakeasy-restaurant. . . . Well, little wonder. . . . The average speakeasy-restaurant usually offers a grand meal—and for a reasonable tariff. . . . And the waiters do not serve you as though they were doing you a favor. . . . Three restaurant stickups in three nights—and the papers carried no report of them. . . . All in the Gay Belt, too. . . . In one of them the robbers worked so skillfully that the diners had no idea the holdup was going on. . . . Two of the diners might have improved their technique. . . . No wonder the circus couldn't make up its mind about its premiere date in New York—the managements of all circuses are going a little crazy trying to figure out routes. . . . No good going through Iowa and Illinois until after the oat harvest. . . . No good going South until the cotton is picked. . . . And it would be suicide going into the wheat belt until we have another war and $2 wheat.

That cop in the night club doesn't see what I see. . . . He hasn't been around long enough. . . . He isn't seasoned. . . . There he was making out his nightly report. . . . "6 a. m." he wrote, "and all is well." . . . Yeah? . . . Over at the table two feet away from him was a well-to-do feller, with everything he wanted—except the gal he adores. . . . I saw him talking to her in the foyer so sincerely. . . . She was indifferent and he was begging her to be nice to him—and he was holding her hand. Then he began to cry. . . . All is well? . . . What do you mean all is well? . . . And how about that movie magnate sitting over there? . . . The one whose wife won't give him a divorce so he can keep his promise to that little girl who has been waiting all these years? . . . And the young movie star who talked to her husband on the long distance phone a few minutes before and told him not to be so silly and not to worry about her—that she was behaving herself. . . . And all the time her honey boy was standing there next to her pinching her or kissing her dainty shoulder. . . . Huh—all is well!

That was a graceful end to young Louis Warner's career. . . . Louis was 22 when he passed on the other day in the hospital. . . . One of the likeable lads in the Broadway fog, who never abused the privilege of being part of a famous movie family. . . . He knew he was dying when they summoned his kin to his bedside. . . . He urged them all not to weep. . . . He never took a drink of liquor—so just before he breathed his last he asked for champagne. . . . Lifting his glass high, he wished them all well—and then proposed a toast to the nurse—and thanked her for being patient with him. . . . Then he went to sleep.

Miner, 21, Killed, Crushed by Cars

SOUTH FORK, Pa., April 9.—William Keal, 21, was killed yesterday when crushed between two cars at the Ehrenfeld mine.

OFFICIALS DENY CAROL TROTH

WASHINGTON, April 9.—(AP.)—Published reports King Carol II soon might announce his engagement to a princess of the House of Bourbon were denied by the Rumanian legation in a formal statement.

The legation said:

"The royal Rumanian legation is authorized to deny the statements published in some of the newspapers here to the effect that King Carol II might soon announce his engagement to a Bourbon princess.

"Queen Marie, of Rumania discussed with Grand Duke Cyril at St. Briac the possibility of a marriage between Prince Nicholas and Grand Duchess Kyra, daughter of Grand Duke Cyril."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas blows up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute.

NEW OFFICER OF POLAR SUB REJOICES

Quartermaster Welcomes Berth Though Tragedy Paved Way; Has No Fears

By HERMAN GIESKE

YONKERS, N. Y., April 9.—John H. Lundbeck, 35, new quartermaster of the Nautilus, signed on without the slightest tremor, he says, to take the berth made vacant by the untimely death of Quartermaster Willard Grimmer, lost at sea on the Nautilus trial trip.

Lundbeck it happened had filed his application for the expedition many months before Grimmer's accidental death, and as Lundbeck's rating as a submarine man was high, he was not surprised when notified in New York that he had been chosen to take Grimmer's job.

GLAD OF CHANCE

Lundbeck says:

"It never occurred to me to be superstitious about it at all. This is a scientific expedition, and, while no one likes, as the saying goes, 'to step into a dead man's shoes,' I was glad of the opportunity, although deeply regretting that it had to come to me as a result of Grimmer's unhappy fate."

Lundbeck is a qualified submarine man of many years' experience. His home is in Brooklyn, where his wife and two children, Lillian, 11, and Candace, 2, will await his return without any trepidation.

THRIVES ON THRILLS

Lundbeck apparently has no fear of the bizarre. Only recently he was engaged in the perilous task of installing elevators atop the new Empire State Building.

That job took him up in the air 902 stories. A single false step, and Lundbeck might have been precipitated, as were other workmen, to his death on the pavement below.

As quartermaster of the Nautilus, Lundbeck has already demonstrated his abilities. He was in the vessel's conning tower when she made her recent trial run up the Hudson River, and showed his familiarity with the boat's mechanism.

We May Need New Canal

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

that Mr. Brookhart, of Iowa, can dry up the Canal Zone.

When a sailor joins the Navy to see the world he doesn't want it all to look like Iowa.

The traffic list of killed, wounded and skipping mounts up like the waste pile of a chinaware factory.

Over 50,000 citizens of the walking class were flattened for keeps by twisted-eyed chauffeurs in 1930.

That's more men than we lost in the World War during 1917-18. It's one-way parade that never comes back.

In Paris when you are kissed by a taxicab they don't arrest the driver. They arrest you for being there. Also for carelessness in allowing yourself to be trumped by the opposition.

There's something in that. It teaches a man to keep his foot in his hand and to leap like a ski jumper on a glass mountain.

What has the jayhopper done to keep pace with the steady stream of automotive inventions? In the last 10 years, the motor manufacturers have devised crown fenders, shock absorbers, absorbent bumpers and non-shatterable glass.

It's the curbskipper's own fault. In 3,000 years there hasn't been an improvement in a pedestrian.

We are still the same as we were during the time of Rameses the twice. Still the same. We are skimming the puddles, cavorting across the lanes and acting just as childish as in the days when the only things we had to dodge were sick mules and sway-back oxen drawing carts that didn't have a skid in a carload.

In three centuries the pedestrian has not advanced a yard either in texture, color or mechanism. He is a holdover from the sandal age.

The people have gone in for mass production. But that has only resulted in more people.

But there have been no improvements in the individual. Instead of the crown fenders, shock absorbers and bumpers being on the car we hold that they should be on the pedestrian.

Instead of devising ways of making the motor car more beautiful and enduring why doesn't the Life Extension Bureau dope up a scheme for protecting wild animal life on busy corners?

That's something. We give this advice to Detroit free of charge and non-assessable. We hope they do something with it.

AUTO VICTIM'S RITES SET

Funeral services will be held Saturday afternoon for Donald G. Keeble, 20, Penn State College student who was fatally injured when he fell from an automobile in the William Penn highway near Ebensburg Tuesday night. The body was to be returned today to his home, 424 South Lang avenue. He died yesterday in a Johnstown hospital.

Keeble was on his way back to school after spending the Easter holidays at home. A door of the automobile opened when the car rounded a curve and he was thrown out.

Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. Saturday. Burial will be private.

FLIER AND BRIDE DIE IN CRASH

JEFFERSON, O., April 9.—(AP.)—An aviator and his bride of a week, Rollie Patterson, 22, and Mrs. Ruth Patterson, 18, of Madison, Lake County, were killed last night when their airplane crashed at the farm of G. C. Patterson, six miles south of here.

The plane crashed from an altitude of about 80 feet when a wing tip struck the branches of a tree as they were taking off from a meadow. The young bride was dead when witnesses reached the demolished ship.

Execution Halted To Permit Party For Sheriff

JACKSON, Miss., April 9.—(AP.)—Gov. Bilbo accomodatingly stayed the execution of two Negroes yesterday and thereby solved a problem for Sheriff John Sterling, who was torn between his duty of executioner and a yearning to mingle with his fellows at a convention of peace officers here.

The high sheriff of Washington County was greatly perturbed on finding the hangings and the convention came the same day. He appealed to the Governor.

So the two condemned men, convicted of murder, will not be hanged until April 24.

RUSSIA, ITALY IN TRADE PACT

WASHINGTON, April 9.—(AP.)—An agreement whereby Soviet Russia will exchange wheat for Italian motor trucks was announced by the Commerce Department.

M. M. Mitchell, American commercial attache at Rome, advised the department of the proposed exchange by which Russia would acquire approximately 2,000 machines.

He told the department Russia had placed an order for the trucks with an Italian manufacturer, and the Italian government had signed notes for 75 per cent of their cost, but the manufacturer would not be permitted to discount them.

Mitchell said Italy would receive the wheat from Russia and sell it to meet the notes.

LAUDS VACCINE AS PREVENTIVE

Dr. John A. Kolmer, professor of pathology and bacteriology in the Graduate School of Medicine, University of Pennsylvania, spoke on "The Present Status of Vaccine and Non-Specific Foreign Protein Therapy" at a dinner meeting of the Allegheny County Medical Society, held by the board of trustees and the medical board of the Montefiore Hospital, in the Concordia Club last night.

Dr. Kolmer declared vaccines have proved more valuable in prevention than in cure of disease. He said that no matter how carefully vaccine is prepared, poor or indifferent organisms of bacteriologic technic may defeat its purpose.

ROSENBAUM'S BASEMENT

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

NEW YORK, April 9.

AS I HAVE written many times before, some of my best material—if any—comes from gentlemen who have either been in jail at one time or are even now behind the bars. Their stories are always interesting to me and, for some unknown reason, they are willing to tell them to me. Come to think of it, inasmuch as I get money for writing this kind of stuff, they probably regard me as a brother crook.

At any rate, on several occasions, boys have dropped in to see me after being released from their favorite penitentiaries. Their complaints are always the same. They want to remain honest, but they can't find work. They'll do anything at all to earn a living. Can I help them?

It goes without saying that I cannot. Even in the best of times, it is a rare concern that will give an ex-convict a job. And in these troubled days the opportunities are even rarer.

There is something terribly rotten about the American system of treating released prisoners. Most people shrug their shoulders, mutter that a crook is a crook and let it go at that. They shouldn't. The problem is far deeper than that. The man who makes one mistake isn't given a fighting chance after his punishment is over. As a matter of fact, it is when he steps out of jail that his punishment really begins.

Suppose a man is released and wants to go straight. He can't get a job. When he can't get a job, he has no money. When he has no money, he is hungry. When he is hungry, he is desperate. When he is desperate, he steals.

They catch him. Back to jail he goes again. And the good people repeat their favorite phrase, "a crook is a crook."

On the surface, they are right. But underneath lies a situation that makes me wonder if our civilization is really as advanced as we think it is. . .

Sorry to bore you with so much about a subject that doesn't mean a great deal to the average man. But I'm a little daffy on that particular topic and you'll have to excuse me for my long-windedness on that account. What I really started out to do was to tell you about Tom, an ex-convict who dropped in to see me several weeks back.

I had never met Tom, but he had been writing to me from Welfare Island for the last two years. He settled himself comfortably beside my desk, told me he had been released a few weeks back and asked if I could help him find a job.

"I'd like to help you, Tom," I told him, "but I'm afraid there isn't a thing in the world I can do. Times are too tough. I honestly wouldn't know where to send you."

Tom shrugged his shoulders.

"I didn't think you'd have anything for me," he said. "Just felt that I'd run in and chance it. How did you like the stuff I've been sending you from the Island?"

I told him I had enjoyed it very much. We talked on. Tom was quite chesty about himself. He admitted rather proudly that he was one of the best crooks in the business.

"I'm a swell burglar," he chirped. "I can get in anywhere. When it comes to getting into places, Houdini had nothing on me."

He leaned forward and pounded the desk.

"But I'm telling you something right now, Mark," he continued. "I'm through. I'm sick and tired of jails and I'm gonna hit the straight road from now on.

"If I could only get a job somewhere. Twenty bucks a week would look like heaven to me until I work off my parole. Then I could go away and get a fresh start."

Tom seemed absolutely in earnest. I wanted very much to help him. I thought of numerous people to whom I might send him—and the name of Nils T. Granlund finally popped into my mind.

As a radio expert and an employer of a large girl show in the Hollywood Restaurant, Granlund might be able to get Tom something to do. So I wrote to Nils and gave the letter to Tom.

"Take this over to Granlund," I told him. "He might be able to help you. But I'm telling you just one thing. I have your word that you're going straight. If you do anything crooked, you'll be the sorriest guy that ever lived."

He gripped my hand in a warm clasp.

"Mark," he said, "you have my word. I won't let you down."

"When I say I'm going straight, I mean it. Even if I see a cinch layout for a man with my class, I'm gonna turn my back on it. Thanks a million times."

Tom left. A week went by. Two weeks. I forgot the incident. And one morning I opened my paper to find that Tom had been arrested in connection with a robbery.

At that moment I was sorer than I'd been since I took my first horseback ride. I had tried to help the man. I had believed him when he promised to reform. I had given him a letter to Granlund. And he had repaid me by getting arrested again. You can take it from me that I was plenty burned.

A few days later I received a letter from Tom. He wrote exactly as you might have expected him to write.

He was terribly sorry. He knew I must think him a rat of the worst kind. He wasn't really guilty of the crime with which he was charged. And so forth and so on.

Down near the end, he penned a line that repaid me for everything I had done. The entire experience automatically became worth while.

"I went to see your friend, Granlund," wrote the expert burglar who had likened himself to Houdini. "As a matter of fact, I went to see him six times. But it was no use, Mark. I couldn't get into his office." . . .

CHILD TRAFFIC TOLL MAPPED

Large maps, locating the 105 fatal and 620 nonfatal child traffic accidents in Pittsburgh during the last three years, have been sent to all city schools by the Better Traffic Committee. The maps are covered with symbols in red, and will be kept to date by the mailing of monthly bulletins by the traffic committee.

Child fatalities have decreased 25.3 per cent, while adult traffic deaths have shown a 43.3 per cent increase and traffic volumes have mounted 57.7 per cent in the eight-year period covered by the City Bureau of Traffic Planning's statistics.

Dr. Ben G. Graham, head of the Pittsburgh public schools, and the Rev. Paul E. Campbell, superintendent of parochial schools, have indorsed the map distribution as having educational value in bringing street traffic hazards home to school pupils.

PLAN BUILDING IN JERUSALEM

Construction of the $500,000 Rosenbloom building, largest in the proposed Hebrew University group in Jerusalem, will be under way this summer, according to plans revealed today by Dr. Judah L. Magnes, chancellor of the university, who will visit Pittsburgh next Tuesday and Wednesday.

The building is being constructed by Mrs. Sol Rosenbloom, of Beechwood boulevard. The site selected is on Mt. Scopus, overlooking Jerusalem. Architect's drawings were received here yesterday. The university's institute of Jewish studies will be housed in the building.

Dr. Magnes will be the guest of Mrs. Rosenbloom during his two-day visit here. He will be given a dinner by professional men Wednesday in Webster Hall Hotel and will speak at a meeting the same evening in the Morris Kaufmann Memorial auditorium of the Y. M. and W. H. A. Tuesday noon he will speak at a luncheon of the Pittsburgh chapter of Hadassah in the Hotel Schenley.

You either feel GOOD or you don't

Chief Connally had both these experiences

"I FELT weak and rundown. My color showed that my blood was very pale. I suffered from poor circulation. A Pathological Laboratory made a test of my blood, and the examination showed it to be 33% below normal. It was then that I decided to take a course of S.S.S.

"In about six weeks' time, after taking S.S.S. regularly, I had another blood test made, and it showed that my blood had been restored to normal. My appetite was greatly improved; so much so, that I could eat pork, and the like, without any discomfort. And to my surprise, my skin and complexion became clear as almost new, and like a child's.

"I think S.S.S. is the most wonderful blood medicine and tonic of its kind on the market today. It has so improved my circulation and the condition of my blood that it has made me feel like a young man again, although I am 56 years old."

C. P. Connally
Asst. Chief of Police, Atlanta.

Catarrh Causes Head Noises and Deafness

Great European Remedy Opens Up Clogged Nostrils and Relieves Catarrhal Deafness

Few people realize what a serious disease catarrh really is. If neglected, the damage it does is often irreparable. Deafness, lung troubles, and head noises that drive the sufferer nearly frantic are frequently due to this insidious disease, whilst neglect of catarrh often makes the victim into a worn-out, run-down catarrhal wreck. What is catarrh today may soon be something far more serious. It is more than a trifling ailment—more than a disgusting disease. It is dangerous one. Unchecked, it frequently destroys smell, taste and hearing, and slowly but surely undermines the general health.

If you have catarrh go to Max Liggetts or your druggist and get an ounce of Parmint (Double Strength). Take this home and add to it ½ pint of hot water and a little ordinary sugar. Take a tablespoonful four times a day.

Catarrh being a disease of the blood, the only possible way to relieve it is by treating the blood itself. Drive the catarrhal poisons from the system by treating the blood, and the disease itself must vanish. Parmint has proved successful in so many cases because it acts directly upon the blood and mucous membrane.

To be able to breathe freely, to rest plainly, smell, taste, and arise in the morning refreshed and strong, and with the head and throat free from phlegm, are conditions that make life worth living. For your own sake give Parmint a trial—and with your whole system crying for relief you should start the treatment now.

PIRATE OPENER IN CHICAGO MAY BE RELAYED HERE

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

Pat Flanagan's play by play description of the Chicago-Pittsburgh opening game at the Cubs' park next Tuesday may be relayed to this city via WBBM, Chicago, and WJAS, it was learned today. H. J. Brennan, manager of WJAS, and James Murray, publicity director, burned up the wires to the Windy City this morning in an attempt to make the necessary arrangements. Flanagan is rated one of the best sports announcers in the country. Bryan Untiedt, 13-year-old hero of the recent school bus disaster in Denver, who made several sacrifices for his companions, is to tell his story of the happening on WCAE at 6 o'clock tonight in a direct relay from Lamar, Col. We view with pleasure the return of Irene Jones as a piano soloist, KDKA, at 7:45. Irene is 10 of the "20 Fingers of Sweetness" and a sister of Mathilde Harding, NBC and CBS star, who is to be heard next Tuesday night as guest artist with the Rochester Civic Symphony on the WJZ network.

Irene Jones

If we were to name the 15-minute programs giving Amos 'n' Andy the most competition, we would include "Gene and Glenn," "Sisters of the Skillet," "Clara, Lu and Em," "The Gossipers" (new on WJAS), and that sparkling "Daddy and Rollo" series.

* * *

Didn't you get a laugh out of Rollo telling his father last night that he had rented his dog, "Cleopatra," to the neighbor's children at a rate of 5 cents a day? Who said Tom Sawyer was dead?

Oh, well—and what a kick the society folks must have received when "Lena" bid "Three Shovels" (meaning spades) in her first game of bridge. And when she meant clubs she called "Two Shamrocks."

* * *

Impressed by the way the hostess dressed and acted, Lena told Jake that she must be "No. 398" in the "400."

QUESTION A DAY:

What is the latest on television?—B. L., Carrick.

Answer—Still very much experimental. Both networks and 21 individual stations broadcasting daily. Latest development is a neon tube which reproduces television pictures eight by 10 inches.

John Ringling and a host of circus celebrities, are billed for WJZ Saturday night. Clyde Ingalls, circus "barker," is to describe the scene.

Etta Cunningham proved more than ever last night that she belongs to the network. Tom Waring's style is something like "Little Jack Little," yet he is in a class by himself. We enjoy your programs, Tom.

* * *

Frank Verner, with KDKA six years, a graduate of Peabody High School and a choir boy in Calvary Episcopal, is to keep WPDU, Pittsburgh's police station, on its wavelength.

If you stay up late for DX, try KOOS, Marshfield, Oregon (1370 kc.) at 2 o'clock Friday morning, or WHBF, Rock Island, Ill. (1210 kc.) at 3 a. m.

* * *

Southland Singers (KDKA at 9:30) formed their quartet in the basement of an African Methodist Church in Harlem and rehearsed three months before appearing in public. They are to sing in the next Amos 'n' Andy picture.

Jessica Dragonette's picture in colors, suitable for framing, is a feature of this Sunday's Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

Spring—and circus time—hear George Hicks tell all about it at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon over WTAM, direct from the Ringling-Barnum and Bailey sawdust ring in Madison Square Garden.

Radio Fans to Get Spirituals Again Tonight

A new program on the air seldom is accorded such a reception as was given last Thursday evening to the broadcast of the Dixie Spiritual Singers. These singers are to be heard again tonight at 8 o'clock over Station KDKA.

Highbrow musical folk in the big cities, as well as lovers of spirituals the country over, responded with enthusiasm to the wonderful quality of these natural voices. The spirituals, as sung by this large group of negro singers, have a rhythm which once heard can never be forgotten.

The Dixie Spiritual Singers sing without accompaniment.

The group of songs on this evening's program includes, "I Want To Be Ready" and "Standing in the Need of Prayer." The programs will continue Thursday evenings at the same hour.

The LOUDSPEAKER—By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, April 9.—To American listeners the NBC's three musical counsellors, Walter Damrosch, Mme. Schumann-Heink and Reinald Werrenrath are becoming a triumvirate of master minds whose advice on music matters is sought by all classes of radio auditors.

All kinds of questions come daily to them. Will jazz destroy the hearer's appreciation of the classics? Who should tune the family piano? What instruments should children learn to play? How should one begin a radio career? Will the Metropolitan ever produce a jazz opera by an American?

Answering mail comprises only a small part of the radio duties of the three. Each has important work to do at the microphone, each has considerable program supervision to perform. In addition to directing orchestras, Damrosch gives special auditions almost daily at his home, consults with and advises young musicians, maintains a close contact with various school units, confers with broadcasting officials.

Many listeners, however, believe that Damrosch's activities extend far beyond these duties. A woman in New Jersey asked the conductor to visit her home and tune her piano. She wouldn't trust the job to anyone else.

The myth that oboe players either go crazy or die young causes Damrosch much extra work. Repeatedly, parents, fearful of the future of their children who have been induced to play that unoffending instrument, write to him for counsel. He advises them to ignore the myth, remarking that he knows many oboe players who have reached a ripe old age with no indications of mental disturbance.

Many persons believe that these three musicians possess magical powers that they have only to say "Presto, chango" to bring an obscure singer or a novice to immediate fame before the microphone. Invariably the answer is the same.

"Study hard and conscientiously. Obtain an audition at a broadcasting studio and work up from the bottom."

Ed East and Ralph Dumke, known to the armchair hosts as Sisters of the Skillet, have been in New York negotiating for commercial sponsorship of their radio act. There is a lot to East and Dumke. Together on the hoof they mass about 500 pounds.

The fame of these comedians is expected to increase once they become identified with the the voice of commerce. For one thing they will be assigned to a more popular hour—an hour when their particular style of lampooning will reach more readily the ears of men.

East and Dumke are natives of Indiana, and Dumke is a product of Notre Dame, where he studied chemistry under Knute Rockne. Some years ago they toured the vaudeville circuits in a song-and-piano act. Like Gosden and Correll they saw greater possibilities in radio. Wisely they decided not to woo microphonic fame with their vaudeville specialty. There were already too many song-and-piano acts in radio.

They spent hours listening to programs. Listening, they could not escape those serious periods devoted to household hints no matter how restlessly they turned the dials. An idea struck them. Why not burlesque the household hints?

And burlesque them they did. Their broadcast is composed of clever nonsense. There is something of the comic strip character about it. One hears whimsical, sometimes far-fetched, solutions of impossible problems. Based chiefly upon letters which they receive, the program also possesses the merit of being extemporaneous.

Real Estate

The Woodstock Typewriter Company of Chicago has leased from the Commonwealth Trust Company two storerooms on the second floor of the Hotel Roosevelt, Penn avenue and Sixth street, according to the Horner Real Estate Company, downtown brokers.

New first mortgage real estate financing in the United States during the first quarter of this year totaled $34,768,850—a decline of 52 per cent from the total for the same period a year ago, according to the monthly investment review of Nelson, Hunt & Co. Analysis of the review's figures showed this decline in new realty issues publicly offered by leading investment bankers was largely due to a 76 per cent decrease in the volume of new office and commercial building financing, which comprises approximately 42 percent of the total offerings in the first quarter of 1930. Financing of a miscellaneous character also showed a 68 per cent decline from the total of $28,507,500 registered in the same period last year, including a number of realty stock issues.

Eight hundred and twenty-five realtors have already made reservations for the annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, to be held May 27 to 30 in Baltimore, Herbert U. Nelson, executive secretary of the association, attributes this large advance registration to the fact that real estate brokers are especially interested this year in hearing addresses designed to aid them in their business. He predicts a possible audience at Baltimore of 2,000. Two demonstration appraisals have been added to the list of features planned for the convention in addition to the regular programs. For the first time these demonstrations, one on a commercial and the other on a residential property, will be offered to those attending the convention. The States Council, composed of representatives of member boards, including the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board, will meet in Baltimore Thursday, May 28, to discuss further ways and means of aiding the realty interests through this organization. Mark Graves, tax commissioner of New York state, will address this group. The subject will be "Fair Distribution of the Tax Burden."

Applications for building permits follow:

First Ward—M. Talbot, brick extension, 1102 Vickroy street, $2,000.

Second Ward—Pennsylvania Railroad Company, brick building, Smallman street, $30,000.

Eleventh Ward—A. E. Siedle, alterations, 6011-13 Penn avenue, $25,000.

Nineteenth Ward—J. C. Newcomer, brick dwelling, 2443 Glenarm avenue, $4,500.

"Around the World With Jesus," a pageant by children of the Ben Avon Methodist Episcopal Sunday School, will be presented April 19 in the church. A cast of 40 will be augmented by a boys' choir. The pageant will be under the direction of Mrs. C. H. Spencer and Mrs. George Grant.

True story: Mary was 4 years old and, her parents hoped, the perfect child. Her rearing was different from that of any other child's. There were no beatings, no scoldings, nothing but love and, if we might say so, cooperation. If Mary did something one shouldn't do, then her mother or father very kindly pointed out the error of her young ways and, of course, she wouldn't commit the same mistake again. But one day the whole structure fell. Mary went to the library which her father valued above most of his possessions and took from it an especially valuable book—a hand-printed book. From it Mary tore a leaf and proudly exhibited it to her mother.

Even so, the mother was faithful to her cause. She pointed out to Mary that this book was like no other, that the monks had taken many hours carefully brushing the pages for the illumination, and so forth. And as she concluded her wise sermon, she said to her child, "Now, what would you do to a girl who tore a page out of a book like this?"

"Why," spoke up Mary after no deliberation whatever, "I'd spank her."

John Nossokoff, the musician, who is helping to arrange the show which the musicians will give at Syria Mosque next Wednesday, recalls the days of the old Academy Theater in Liberty avenue, near Wood street.

The late Gus Dietz was the fiddler in the theater's orchestra for 30 years, and one day, when he turned up for rehearsals, he discovered the theater had burned to the ground during the night. He went home with the sad news and told his wife.

"Gus," criticized Mrs. Dietz, "I told you when you took that job it wouldn't last."

"Bruises hurt erased afford erector analysis hurt too infectious dead."

And this is how the wire read after Mrs. Harmon had interpreted it:

"Bruce is hurt. He raced a Ford. He wrecked her. And Alice is hurt, too. In fact, she's dead."

Tough Butcher Is Lured Into Booze Racket

THE SECRET SIX
By Frances Marion

CHAPTER I.

Heavy, black fog intensified the shadowy dusk. It mantled the lights on Centro's main street, and spewed the sidewalks with a slimy moisture. The mooing of the boat whistles on the river front blended with the sharper staccato blasts from the stockyards. The great gates of the packing plants swung open, disgorging a horde of rubber-coated figures, who disappeared into the lowering darkness.

Down the street lumbered the huge form of a man, dimly outlined in the haze. He was a burly creature, clad in rough, unshapely garments. His great gorilla-like arms swung with every step. From beneath the brim of a battered felt hat his small, piercing eyes glared to right and left; his brow was corrugated by a deep frown. A closer scrutiny of the menacing figure disclosed blood-stains on his hands and clothing.

A passing policeman turned, and stared at the sinister giant, then a glimmer of recognition showed in his eyes. "Hello, Slaughterhouse!" he barked.

The big man grunted. Raising a great ham-like hand, he wiped his stubbly chin, stained by tobacco-juice. He paused and squinted at a door, beneath a dim electric globe.

On the dingy pane was inscribed:

"Johnny Frank's Steak House."

From within came the sound of clattering dishes. The man entered and swept the place with a glance. In the rear, a dull red glare arose from a coal broiler. The sizzle of frying meat. The stink of fish and burned lobster-shells. The haze of smoke that hung like a pungent, miasmic fog over the tables. That was only a part of the unsavory pattern. The man paused at the counter and grinned at the cook, who peered at him through bloodshot eyes.

A Tough Character

"Hello, Barber's Itch, where's Johnny?"

"In back, Slaughterhouse."

"Who's that?" asked the cook's helper, as the man lumbered toward the rear booths.

"Louie Scorpio—they all call him Slaughterhouse. A champ steer killer over at the stockyards. Tough egg. Licked a foreman last week and run him off the place. Good shot, too. Won the revolver prize at the Butchers' Annual Picnic."

Scorpio peered into one of the six private booths along the narrow passage leading to the alley door. The occupants were two men, and as Scorpio sat down he greeted them with a nod.

The gray pallor of Johnny Franks' face was accentuated by a livid scar across his chin. His watery eyes regarded Scorpio appraisingly. His companion, Nick Mizoski, was heavily set, with a shallow, hawklike face. In certain circles, he was better known as "The Gouger."

"I see Allen was bumped off last night," Scorpio remarked to Franks. The latter nodded and grinned. "Too bad he got hit by that auto, ain't it, Gouger?"

The Gouger frowned.

"Lay off that Gouger stuff. This here is a hick town, but even a hick cop might remember that one."

A slovenly waiter came up to the table, a dirty towel flung over his arm.

"Well, Slaughterhouse, what's it going to be?"

"A platter of spaghetti, heavy on tabasco—and a bottle of cow."

Gets Proposition

As the waiter walked away, Franks grinned.

"Say, Slaughterhouse, been thinkin' over what we talked to you about?"

Scorpio balanced a fork on his finger before he replied.

"Yeah. A lot. You guys may be making jack, but you'll get into jams too. It's a bloody kind of game where you gotta bump guys off."

"So's yours," retorted Johnny. "Hammering down steers ain't exactly a gent's job—and 35 a week won't make you no millionaire. Of course—if you're satisfied, okay. We picked you to trail with us because you're supposed to be a big shot at

THIN PAVING REVEALED IN BEECHVIEW

Composition 2 Inches Thick Instead of 5 Inches Plans Specified; Lang to Act

Another revelation in sidewalk paving done by private contractors under supervision of inspectors of the City Department of Public Works came today when it was learned that pavements in Cape May avenue, Beechview, were only two inches thick instead of five inches, as required by specifications.

An undetermined portion of more than 332 yards laid on the thoroughfare by the Welsh Construction Company in 1928 has been discovered to be below departmental specifications.

REPORTED BY EVANS

Attorney Henry Oliver Evans, who has charged the Public Works Department with general inefficiency, called attention to the condition of the sidewalk after it had been reported to him by an interested citizen.

Phillip Spann, of 6725 McPherson boulevard, inspector on the sidewalk improvement projects in 1928, resigned March 9 this year. No reason was given for his resignation, the department's personnel records show.

TEST BORINGS PLANNED

Total cost of pavement work done by the Welsh Construction Company for 1928 is $25,000, according to Public Works Director Edward G. Lang.

The matter will be turned over to the bureau of tests, Lang said, for a report. Test borings will be made to determine the exact thickness. It is likely, Lang declared, that he will demand of the company that it tear up the pavement in question and relay it in accordance with stipulations of the contract.

Whether he would spread the investigation to include all work done by the Welsh organization in 1928 in pavement construction could not be determined, Lang said, until he received a report on Cape May avenue.

Garage Destroyed In Hillside Fire

Firemen from Mt. Washington and the West End early today were forced to lay several hundred feet of hose to extinguish a blaze in a frame garage on the side of Duquesne Heights overlooking Shalerville. The fire destroyed a garage owned by Elias McGee, a Negro. Although the garage is said to have contained two trucks and a pleasure car, the loss amounted to but $100, police at the Mt. Washington station reported.

The committee in charge includes E. C. Koontz, chairman; C. L. Grigsby, W. S. Allen, Anthony Staab, Howard L. Speer, George A. Baker and E. P. Samson. E. Louis Hartwell will be toastmaster.

Buffalo Bill's Kin, Stork Reward Pittsburgh Man

While Thomas W. Nelson, magazine representative, of 107 Morewood avenue, was admiring his new-born baby boy in Allegheny General Hospital yesterday, he received word that he had been bequeathed the famous marble bungalow built by Charles O. Ward, 82, cousin of W. F. (Buffalo Bill) Cody, in Knoxville, Tenn.

Mr. Ward died recently as a result of an automobile accident.

Nelson said today he met Mr. Ward only casually six years ago while he was visiting in Knoxville. Since that time, he and his wife have been annual guests at Mr. Ward's bungalow, built of white Tenessee marble.

Nelson said the gift came as a surprise, because he and Mr. Ward never had discussed the bungalow. He also will receive all of the contents of the house, which include a valuable library.

He said:

"Mr. Ward was a fine gentleman. His bungalow is beautiful, but we can hardly live in it, because my work is here. It's all like that song: 'A bungalow for two, and baby makes three.'"

Marching to Certain Defeat, Foch Said of Allies, Rent by Foe

By MARSHAL FERDINAND FOCH

Commander-in-Chief of the Allied Armies During the Closing Phases of the World War.

Translated from the French by Col. T. Bentley Mott.

CHAPTER XII.

On March 21, 1918, the plan of the German staff was carried out in all its amplitude. The material means brought into action 50 divisions, and the extent of the attack (50 miles) was far greater than anything seen since stabilization had taken place on the western front. In no way inferior were the results obtained.

On the north, the British 3rd Army maintained in general its positions, but it was quite otherwise with Gen. Gough's 5th Army. Along almost the whole of its front it was swept away, its right, in particular, being thrown back west of Saint Quentin up to the edge of the Crozat Canal.

On the following day, the 22d, this army, badly shaken, retreated toward the Somme. An extraordinary fact here took place—one only to be explained by the contagion which spread from the confused and shaken troops, driven in by the heavy attack on the front line: The Somme, running several miles in rear, was captured by the enemy practically without a blow being struck. The same phenomenon occurred at the Aisne, two months later, during the attack on May 27.

Despite the intervention of the British reserves, the general retirement of the 5th Army proceeded at such a pace as to show that its power of resistance had been seriously weakened.

Field Marshal Haig, becoming anxious, requested Gen. Petain to relieve as quickly as possible by French troops the British contingents distributed between the Oise and the Somme at Peronne. But Gen. Petain was considerably preoccupied by his own front in Champagne and for the moment he could do no more than adhere

COL. U. S. GRANT III

Col. Grant, grandson of Gen. U. S. Grant, in McKeesport when he spoke to the seven surviving Civil War veterans of McKeesport G. A. R. at their annual Appomattox Day banquet at the Penn-McKee Hotel.

In yesterday's instalment, Marshal Foch described the opening of the great German drive on the Western Front, on March 21, 1918, which the German General Staff believed would bring victory. Foch had been advocating unified command to co-ordinate the Allied operations and the peril that loomed when the German drive got under way confirmed his contention. In today's instalment, the Marshal tells of the disaster that threatened the Allies and of the vital necessity for the immediate creation of a Supreme Command.

AMEN DINNER SINGER NAMED

EMPLOYES OF COUNTY TO GIVE

Elective Officials Agree On Canvass; $876,874 Raised Toward 3 Million

Workers for the Allegheny County Emergency Association, engaged in a two weeks' drive for $3,000,000 to operate the Pittsburgh Plan for employment stabilization, today reported $60,378.55 more contributions at their luncheon in the Chamber of Commerce. This brings the total to $876,874.99. Yesterday the workers reported $30,612.13.

Division "A," soliciting individuals under General Chairman Walter C. Carroll, was credited with $26,243.51 of the sum reported yesterday. Division "B," a group of 300 members directed by T. P. Gaylord, reported $4,368.62 at the noon meeting in the Chamber of Commerce.

SPEAKERS FOR DAY

Speakers today were to be Edgar J. Kaufmann, at the monthly meeting of the members of the board of Congress of Women's Clubs; R. Templeton Smith, at the weekly meeting of the Monarch Club; Attorney C. W. Carlson, at the weekly meetings of the Kiwanis and Lions clubs, and L. B. Harnish, at several group meetings throughout the city.

Maj. Philip Mathews, executive director of the emergency association, who addressed the campaign workers at yesterday's report luncheon, explained in detail how men are selected from relief lists of welfare organizations to go to work on public jobs. The staff at the headquarters of the association, he said, were, with the exception of many special workers whose services have been donated, taken from the lists of the unemployed.

MAKES MONEY CIRCULATE

Mathews declared that each dollar spent in the operation of the Pittsburgh plan puts from $1.60 to $1.80 into circulation.

A majority of the elective officials of Allegheny County have agreed to ask the employes in their departments who are working full time and earning $150 or more a month, to contribute a day's wages to the fund. County officials expect to raise about $25,000.

The decision was reached at a meeting attended by County Commissioners Joseph G. Armstrong and C. C. McGovern, Treasurer John Francies, Sheriff Robert S. Cain, Clerk of Courts S. J. Topley, District Attorney Andrew T. Park, Controller Robert G. Woodside, Recorder of Deeds Samuel D. Foster, and Directors of the Poor Clyde M. Miller and H. H. Dixon.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

MANAGUA, Nic., April 9.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Well, here we are at Managua, Nicaragua. They tell you pictures don't lie, but the ones you saw of this earthquake did, for they didn't tell that here, eight days after it happened, there are from one to three hundred bodies still under those ruins.

Will Rogers

Sitting here in a Marine tent writing. The doctor is coming around to shoot me for typhoid and then I am going to learn to cuss and will be a real Marine.

Naturally what they need is money. The government or the people haven't got a cent. The Red Cross combined with the relief organization here has done great work as usual and still is. Minister Hanna says that if through the Red Cross and public donations from up home they could get $250,000, it would relieve the situation as to food, and get some roofs to cover these people. If you saw, as I did, 2,500 mothers with babes in their arms go by and get their ration of milk, you would say there was some poor devil that needed it worse than you do.

Yours, WILL.

THIRD SUSPECT IN HYMIE ALIBI CASE SOUGHT HERE

PARK PLANNING PROSECUTION OF PAIR

Seeks to Bring Witnesses From Cleveland to Push False Testimony Charges

A Pittsburgh man detectives accuse of framing the plan to establish an alibi for Hymie Martin, convicted last week for the murder of former Councilman William E. Potter, of Cleveland, was being sought here today. The man is sought by detectives who wish to prosecute him with two others who are known to the detectives.

District Attorney Andrew T. Park yesterday said he was preparing to prosecute the latter two, who testified here during the extradition proceedings that Martin was in this city the night of the murder. When placed on trial in Cleveland, Martin changed his alibi and said he was in Akron, O., the night of the murder.

District Attorney Park said he plans to bring here from Cleveland four or five witnesses who testified at Martin's trial that he was in Akron the night Potter was slain. They will be taken before the grand jury next week.

Park said he could not compel the witnesses to appear here but detectives said they could induce at least two of the witnesses, also Cleveland officers who heard the testimony, to come. Through the witnesses it is hoped to indict the local men for false testimony.

URGES GUILTY CHIEF BE FIRED

Although a taxpayer demanded the dismissal of Chief of Police Cecil M. Lowell, of Forest Hills, recently found guilty of extortion by a jury in Criminal Court, the Borough Council last night declined to take action pending outcome of a new trial granted the chief.

H. C. Seller, of Braddock road, Forest Hills, declared:

"It does not look very good for the borough to allow the chief to ride up and down the boulevard after he has been found guilty on that charge. People are talking about it."

Peter Kandra, of 1107 Cherry way, Braddock, accused Chief Lowell of taking $150 from him after he was arrested by a borough policeman, charged with driving under the influence of liquor. Chief Lowell was found guilty January 27, but on recommendation of Visiting Judge Campbell of Butler County, was granted a new trial last month.

MAN FLEES DRY RAID BY LEAP

The proprietor of a club at 6255 Frankstown avenue jumped out the window when a squad of prohibition agents invaded the place last night.

The only person found in the place was an iceman, who informed the agents of the owner's hurried departure by way of the window and fire escapes. The agents reported confiscating 17 pints of whisky, eight quarts of gin and 10 pints of ale.

Jimmie Tope, 36, of 117 Meadow street, was arrested, agents said, when six half-pints of moonshine were found in his pockets and keys which opened the lock of an alleged speakeasy at 6248 Station street, which the agents intended raiding. After a search the agents found nothing in the place, but arrested Tope who, they reported, was standing just around the corner from the club.

DUGGAN TO GIVE TRAFFIC TALK

Solution of street traffic congestion problems in the downtown business district, through the development of at least 2,000 more car parking spaces on the Allegheny and Monongahela wharves, will be discussed by Frank L. Duggan, chairman of the Better Traffic Committee, before the Greater Pittsburgh Milk Dealers' Association in the Fort Pitt Hotel tonight. Peter P. Carney, chairman of the milk dealers' group, will preside.

NEW BASEBALL POOL FORMED

Three "big-shots" of the Pittsburgh numbers racket and a fourth man, heretofore unidentified with racketeers, have joined in promoting a weekly baseball pool, starting Saturday, April 18, it was learned today. Weekly pools will be based on each Saturday's baseball scores in the National, American and American Association leagues.

The combination may be a forerunner, it is said, of another regular daily numbers pool, embracing part of the Hill district and East Liberty and Squirrel Hill territories, extending into parts of Ohio, West Virginia and surrounding Pennsylvania counties. Several other baseball pools operate from this district, it is said, with ramifications extending throughout the eastern United States.

PARK ACCEPTS SUMMER COURT

District Attorney Andrew T. Park said today that he is ready to hold summer sessions in Criminal Court if the judges order them.

Heretofore court has been held only one day a week during July and August to accept pleas of guilty. Park said:

"When we adjourned Criminal Court last June, there were only six cases in jail that had not been disposed of, other than murder cases. Under existing rules, when a magistrate sends a man to jail to be held for next term of court, we could not try him, for instance, in August, because the next term, following June, is September, and the grand jury does not meet until September to act on indictments.

"If the judges want cases tried in summer, we will try them, for there are plenty of assistants in my office available for that purpose."

MURDER JURIES MAY RECEIVE 2 TRIALS TODAY

Ross Township Slaying and South Side Killing Cases Approach Final Stages

Two murder cases, on trial all week in Criminal Court, were expected to go to the juries today.

Emil Schoen, 35, of Bellevue, on trial before Visiting Judge O. Clair Kent, of Crawford County, accused of killing Walter A. Thompson, 31, of 500 East Ohio street, in the home of Adolph Giger in Jacks Run road, Ross Township, February 1, took the witness stand in his own defense, after many character witnesses had testified he was a reputable painting contractor.

Schoen said Thompson and a group of friends went to Giger's home to settle a quarrel. Schoen, armed with a shotgun, ordered them out of the house.

GUN EXPLODES

He said Thompson grasped the gun barrel and another siezed him by the knees and threw him. He said the gun exploded accidently during the struggle, killing Thompson.

Guadalupe J. Gonzales, 29, of 3000 Carson street, being tried before Visiting Judge J. Frank Graff, of Armstrong County, for the slaying of Luis Talamantez, 25, of 3006 Carey way, January 3, was to take the stand and declare that Talamantez had entered his bedroom and struck him on the head with an iron bar.

QUARREL OVER GIRL

He is said to have grasped a revolver from under his pillow and struggled about the room with Talamantez.

The gun was discharged three times, one bullet striking the man. The men are said to have fought over Josephine Mendez, 25, who witnessed the shooting, but she, testifying for the prosecution, denied Talamantez came to the bed and struck Gonzales. She said the struggle occured at the door when Talamantez upbraided Gonzales for being with her.

"What . . . that prickery thing a hair?"

On These Curious Spines Depends Your Hair's Beauty

These little spines on every hair catch and hold the dirt. Ordinary soaps and shampoos do not reach it.

Why does your hair shimmer with beauty when you use Laco Shampoo? Because Laco leaves all the little hair spines clean and shining like the facets of a diamond.

At last a shampoo that is made to "clean out the corners" and bring new shimmering beauty to your hair.

"CORNERS of your hair? Spines?" Yes. The microscope shows that each hair is covered with hundreds of tiny spines. When they are clean, they shine like the facets of a diamond.

But unfortunately they are rarely really clean, for they catch and hold every particle of dust and dirt in their tiny corners. If you use ordinary soap or shampoo, its coarse suds do not penetrate to these little corners.

Wonderful penetrating lather

But at last a shampoo has been made that brings new light and beauty to the hair. Laco Castile Shampoo has a fine-bubble lather which penetrates to every corner of every individual hair and dissolves the dirt. It cleanses the scalp of dandruff and dry scales. Laco's invigorating tingle tells you how thoroughly it is doing its work.

Then, just as important, this fine-bubble lather rinses absolutely and completely. Just an ordinary rinsing and your hair is left, healthfully, beautifully clean. No wonder your hair is brighter and more lustrous than it ever was before.

Pure! — Mild!

Laco Castile Shampoo has as its chief ingredient, pure olive oil Castile. The soap that has been famous for generations as the mildest, safest soap known. Laco contains no free alkali whatever—and no alcohol. It is so mild that it is splendid for a child's tender scalp.

Drop in at your toilet goods counter and get the extra-large 50-cent bottle. Use Laco tonight. Tomorrow your hair can be beautiful with cleanliness. It can have a new shimmering loveliness you never dreamed of.

GERMS

live and multiply in handkerchiefs during COLDS

Tests show single handkerchiefs may contain 4,170,000 disease germs—making it unfit to use or keep

Use Kleenex Tissues!

Prevent Self-Infection

KLEENEX now revolutionizes all previous notions of the way to safeguard health during colds. Take the word of latest scientific tests.

These tests prove that handkerchiefs used during colds carry millions of disease germs—as many as 4,170,000 at one time—which you must carry in your pocket or purse. These germs cause dangerous self-infection—flu, pneumonia and other serious diseases often follow. That is why health authorities recommend the use of Kleenex—it is absolutely safe and sanitary. Use only once and discard.

Kleenex is a soft, super-absorbent tissue. So gentle that irritation is impossible.

You buy Kleenex in Cellophane-sealed packages. It is as completely sanitary as it looks. Each tissue that touches your face is clean as clean can be.

A beauty use

Use Kleenex to remove cleansing cream and cosmetics. It absorbs all impurities from the pores. Saves towels from greasy stains. Replaces dirty "cold cream cloths."

Ask for Kleenex at any drug, dry goods or department store; 25 cents, 50 cents and $1.00. If you have not tried Kleenex, send for a free trial packet to the Kleenex Co., Lake Michigan Bldg., Chicago, Illinois.

BACTERIOLOGICAL TESTS SHOW:

1. That handkerchiefs used by persons having colds may contain as many as 4,170,000 bacteria per handkerchief.
2. That organisms representative of those associated with colds, when impregnated upon linen and rinsed in boiling water and soap water, were not killed nor appreciably inhibited from growing.

These reports are based on tests performed in the laboratories of Dr. Bertram Feuer, Chicago bacteriologist.

N. H. Russell, 35, of 820 Federal street, has established a new record at the North Side Police Station, where he awaits a hearing on two charges of drunkenness. His record is three arrests within 24 hours. Early Wednesday morning he was arrested for drunkenness and discharged a little later. At noon he was back in the station house on a similar charge and was released last night pending his hearing this morning.

The climax came when Russell entered the station early this morning and, police say, in an intoxicated condition, announced that he would "lick any cop on the force." Patrolman Harry Williams took up the challenge and rushed Russell to the nearest cell. He will be given hearings on both charges today.

Secret Marriage Leads To Difficulties

He wouldn't eat or sleep.

He followed her about with his eyes b-b-b-brimming with tears.

He smashed his car.

And when all that didn't work, he took to drink—and brought Sue a flock of empty bottles to prove how he was Going to the Dogs.

All because she said she didn't love him any more.

And now?

We'll let Sue tell it.

"Dear Sally—

"Won't you please lend me your ear for a minute, while I tell you my trouble? I feel just about at the end of my rope—and here's why:

"About six months ago, at 18 years of age, I secretly married my 'financially unprepared' sweetheart, 22 years of age and a fine fellow.

Hubby Takes to Booze

"In about a year he was to be ready . . . and I through college . . . to announce our marriage. We thought the secrecy would keep peace in the family, especially with mother. But it didn't. For in the meantime—during these six months—I was given such a hot time between mother and husband, she demanding and arranging my going out with others, and he raving and storming if I so much as looked at another man—that I finally couldn't stand it any longer, and told her everything.

"The strain had been so terrible that I had become nervous and tearful, so mother sympathized but insisted on arranging for an immediate annulment—as my husband could not keep me, because he was still in school—and mother would not keep me . . . married. This marriage had been in name only, and I suppose this fact, together with all the wrangling, had changed me, so I welcomed mothers' action.

"My husband was forced to agree, much against his will. But he insists that I must never go out with anyone else, and that we shall be remarried later. Well, finally, after much demonstration, I told him tactfully that I no longer loved him. Well, I wish you could have seen and heard him then. And for days afterward. He said I was killing him . . . had broken his heart. He could not—or would not—eat or sleep, so his folks said. He got his car smashed up in an accident. He started drinking, for the first time in his life, and brought me all his empty bottles.

Took Him Back

"And he would follow me around with the most tragic eyes you ever saw, 'hoping I would change my mind.' And all our friends were with him on it. Finally I couldn't stand it any longer. So I told him that I had changed. And now he is back—more than ever. Everywhere I turn, there he is, so attentive, so affectionate, so 'longing looking,' so concerned over my slightest wish—that I could scream and tear my hair. I just feel like fleeing to the other side of the world, and that's straight from the shoulder.

"I hope that you don't think I'm getting any big bang out of this, because I am not. I don't love him, and it is driving me mad.

"Please tell me how I can end it. Help me, advise me, or I don't know what I'll do. I'll be watching for your answer, and depending on it. What'll I do? I'm nearly frantic.

"SENTIMENTAL SUE."

Well, don't wonder. You certainly sound like a pestered lady. But after all, Sister, remember you hung this on yourself. Secret romances are apt to have very public consequences—and all this beliakin is one of them. If you will marry little boys when they're still in the cradle you must expect a certain amount of squawkin' and squallin'.

After all, your own actions haven't been particularly mature. You hardly know your own mind from one minute to the next, half the time you are your husband's wife—the other half your Mama's Baby Daughter.

And now you want to get things settled so you can quiet down and live regular? Then—settle them first, by making up your own mind for your own self. At present, this boy doesn't believe that you have made up your mind—he thinks mamma has made it up for you. Show him that you can do your own thinking.

Stubborn Selfishness

Tell him firmly, once for all, that you do not love him. Then stick to it.

Tears probably will well once more into his tragic eyes and he'll doubtless go forth and empty a few more booze bottles. But—if you have been honest and firm and fair with him—that is no longer your responsibility. And if he continues to whimper and whine after you've given him a definite ultimatum, then it's my opinion that he is putting on a big act and enjoying it.

Wants you? Of course he wants you. But that is no reason why he should have you—unless you wish to go to him. And his insistence on getting what he wants, regardless of your comfort or desire, isn't love. It is stubborn selfishness—a million miles removed from love.

Don't let him get away with it, little girl. Don't let either his tears or the pressure of your "friends" push you into a marriage you'd regret as long as you lived. Whom you marry is your business, and no one else's. Your life belongs to you. It's yours to live, and it is up to you to live it . . . yourself.

So step out and stand up for your rights. Nobody else'll stand up for them if you don't!

Don't let yourself be high-pressured by anybody.

Prayers—Here and There

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

"PLEASE SEND A LITTLE BOY SOME SNOW TO SLIDE ON BEFORE WINTER'S GONE!"
"PLEASE SEND MY JOHN A JOB!"
"KEEP ME YOUNG AND BEAUTIFUL ALWAYS!"
Sand.
1931

"More things are wrought by prayer
Than this world dreams of."
—Tennyson's "Morte d' Arthur."

"I pray the Lord my soul to keep," prays the little boy. And for any other dear wish that he may have a heart full of. He prays for all that he loves right down to Grizzy the dog. The little boy prays aloud, and believes. His prayer is quite different from the grown-up one, even the conscious, faithful one. For waist-deep in years, we begin to learn to forbear, to know that we must not ask for certain things—that it is either too much to ask, or will not be good for us!

The whole world prays—even if many and many of us no longer do it in a church and on our knees. Many lives are prayers. We pray as we go along. Prayer is as primitive an impulse as the wish for your mother when you are hurt. There are very different prayers in different hearts, but almost every one, even when they ask for good fortune, have at the back of them and the very reason for their being, the happiness of someone the supplicant cares for.

A little boy prays for at least ONE good snow before the winter is gone. Snow for a little boy to slide on. That is something a little boy may easily get. A young mother of a family—most anywhere in this land—prays passionately that John may come home with a job. That's a prayer that CAN be answered yes to, and everybody hopes that John comes home with one.

But the THIRD prayer. Prayed in senseless anxiety and fervor—for the impossible, by tragic women who have no marvelous, fundamental stuff of life to take the place of it, when youthful beauty is vanished; a frantic prayer for something they cannot possibly be granted!

There are grand, fine prayers that a little boy and a wishful woman, may easily have answered. But there are tragic, futile ones that a clever woman changes to make me happy and beloved when I do grow old. —NELL BRINKLEY.

How to Keep Well

Carelessness May Cause Lockjaw

"Tetanus," or "lockjaw," as it is commonly called, is a disease produced by a certain type of bacteria. It is a germ found in the earth and in putrefying materials. In accidents, where the broken surface of the skin is exposed and these particular bacteria enter the wound, we face the dangers of lockjaw.

Dr. Copeland

At one time this disease was very common. Many of the accidents of the July 4 celebrations ended in tetanus. Due to the efforts of the health officials everywhere and the work of the American Medical Association, in their program against giant firecrackers and fireworks, these accidents have greatly decreased. Consequently, the prevalence of lockjaw is much less.

The disease has been controlled, too, by the use of "tetanus antitoxin." The use of this neutralizing agent as a matter of routine treatment in all accident rooms of general hospitals and by private physicians, has done marvelous things in reducing the evil effects of such accidents. Even though the wounds may have been exposed to the tetanus bacteria, their fatal effects are destroyed by the treatment.

Lockjaw results from an injury, often of a most trifling character. It is particularly likely to follow in lacerations which have been contaminated by dirt, splinters and clothing. On this account, it is always best to receive the anti-toxin injection immediately after the injury has occurred.

The disease may occur at any time from one day to four weeks after the accident. The first symptom is that of a slight stiffness in the neck or a feeling of tightness in the jaws. There is difficulty in chewing food and in talking.

Gradually the muscles of the face are involved in a spasm. This produces the condition spoken of as lockjaw. The jaws are set.

The course from then on is very rapid. Unfortunately, in a neglected case, the result is usually fatal.

All wounds should be thoroughly cleansed and swabbed with an antiseptic solution. One of the best is a 3 per cent solution of iodine. Where dirt from the streets has entered the wound or fragments of clothing, they must be removed, of course. If pus infection has taken place an incision of the wound is advisable.

Neglect in receiving tetanus anti-toxin is inexcusable. The value of tetanus anti-toxin depends very largely upon its early use.

Cameron Convinces Madge That Offer to Mary Was Prompted by Phil

I could not blame Mary for her patent enjoyment of her dance with Colin Cameron. This was my first thought as the young talkie star led me through the waltz which the musicians were sounding. The man was, I conceded, the best dancer with whom I ever had "trod a measure," although I loyally and truthfully told myself that I much preferred dancing with Dicky, whose steps exactly suit mine. But that knowledge did not prevent me from enjoying to the utmost the dance through which young Mr. Cameron was effortlessly guiding me.

"May I tell you that you dance beautifully, Mrs. Graham?" he said when we had half-circled the room.

"Thank you," I returned demurely, "but that is not the reason you asked me to dance. You want to ask me something, do you not?"

His poise forsook him for the fraction of a second. He halted on a turn, and holding me off looked down at me with plainly startled eyes.

"How did you—" he began, then swung into step again, with a little forced smile on his lips.

"How did I know?" I answered lightly. "Ah, that I must not tell you if you cannot guess."

"But I can." He was himself again. "You were talking with Miss Mary. She told you of the offer I made her, did she not?"

There was a smugness in his tone which made me long to slap him. It was evident that he felt like a king extending a scepter.

"Yes, she did." I had difficulty in getting even that laconic answer out without betraying my irritation.

"Of course you approve," he said confidently. "Miss Mary said she would have to talk things over with you and her uncle before she accepted. I own I was a bit surprised, for chances like this almost never come to a girl without stage experience. But, of course, I understand Mr. Veritzen has been overseeing her studies, a rare chance—for he never bothers with anyone he does not mean to train for himself, and of course there is no question of that in this case."

There was an unconscious interrogative inflection in his voice and I was conscious that he was furtively scrutinizing me. All at once I was certain of what had been only a conjecture. This sleek youth was in Philip Veritzen's confidence. He knew that Mary had been a potential Veritzen star, he knew of her betrothal to Noel, of the bitter opposition of Noel's father, and of the elder man's determination to break up the betrothal by any means in his power, fair or otherwise.

That he was also doing Philip Veritzen's bidding in this offer to Mary of a dancing role in his new talkie, I was also certain. If I had needed confirmation, I received it when a quick glance across the floor showed me Philip Veritzen standing alone against a pillar and eyeing us intently.

"I am sorry but I do not approve," I told the young man with a manner that I am afraid Mary and her mates would have described as "snooty."

His eyes widened with astonishment.

"You do not approve," he repeated. "But surely you do not understand. What reasons—"

"I am sorry," I said perfunctorily again, "but I cannot give you my reasons at this time. But they do not necessarily mean that our niece will refuse your offer. Her uncle is her guardian, and will have the last word. He will let you know."

"But—I am afraid you do not understand." He was distinctly "snooty" himself now. "This offer of mine cannot wait. The casting director is holding this part for Miss Mary as it is. Almost all the others have been filled."

"How can he be holding it, when you only saw our niece dance tonight for the first time?" I asked with apparent innocence, and suppressed a smile at seeing the betraying start he gave. He had been so obsessed with the idea of doing Philip Veritzen's bidding that he had forgotten to be consistent.

"I—I," he began as might a stammering schoolboy, then collected his wandering wits with an admirable effort, and smiled down at me.

"Your niece is so very, very charming," he said, "that it is not strange I used her name without authority. I should have said that the casting director is holding this part for my approval, because other applicants have not suited me. The role is not the leading feminine one, but the dance with me is quite a long one, and I must have a certain type of girl, and an exceptional dancer. Miss Mary fills both requirements, therefore I am anxious to secure her. But, as I said before, I cannot wait. The part must be filled."

"If you cannot wait until day after tomorrow, I am afraid you will have to fill it with someone else," I answered, firmly, "because we cannot give you our decision until then. It is not a matter to be decided lightly, and everybody will sleep most of the day tomorrow."

I made a mental reservation on my own account, for I had plans which would bring me out of bed before daylight. But Mr. Cameron took me at my word and yielded with more reluctance than grace.

"I will try to persuade the casting director to wait until then," he said, but I caught the involuntary glance he sent toward Philip Veritzen, and understood who the "casting director" really was.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Bride's Initials Are Best

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I read something recently to the effect that the modern custom is to have silver marked with the groom's initials. I really know nothing of up-to-date ways and so I must appeal to you. Is this the way it is done now, or is the old way still correct?

Your column is, I am sure, a great help to a great number of people. I have enjoyed it and profited by it for a long time and I welcome this opportunity to express my gratitude and permit me to say that I consider your never failing kindness and patience something at which to marvel.

E. A.

Indeed the old way is correct—the fine, conventional, traditional way of using the initials of the bride's maiden name. From time immemorial the bride-to-be has planned to take to her new home the linen and silver for that home. They were, and still are, considered something of symbols of the union of the two families. As you know, formerly, the little girl began to make her own linen and to collect her silver for the time when Prince Charming was to arrive. Naturally, since she did not know who the Prince Charming was to be, she embroidered her linen with her own initials and had her silver marked with her own initials. And to this day, the well-bred bride follows this tradition; a tradition that has fine feeling and common sense in it.

The new initials, the married initials, do not belong to her when she has her silver marked and this is another reason why she should not use them, I think.

Jewelers who know what's what about such things will tell you that they can tell the difference in good taste and poor taste among the brides-to-be, according to the way they order their silver marked.

(Thank you, thank you, for your kind words . . . I wish you could know how happy you have made me today. Bless you for your appreciation).

A Matter of Courtesy

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I would be very grateful if you would tell me if it is proper for a man to help a woman put on her overshoes?

2. Also if a man should kiss his wife in front of their children and family? R. L.

1. Yes, courtesy and gallantry suggest this service.

2. I can't see why not!

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

That woman who keeps up on beauty points and watches the beauty clock will see that her hairdresser gives her a wide, shadowy wave, whether it be in the form of marcel or finger wave. The pattern should follow the inclinations of the hair to lift or dip; even the straightest glorious mop has ideas of its own about how it should be undulated.

Women who have retained their pre-historic pigtails, having real Godiva locks instead of short or shoulder length, complain that fashion doesn't offer them any special coiffure designs. They're wrong. The braided coronet is being worn again, encircling the head snugly, and so arranged that it tucks under the hat crown. Soft undulations and small curls are revealed along the forehead.

Best to take off cheek rouge, eye shadows and powder with a cold cream or liquid cleanser before starting the facial tubbing with warm water and soap. If soap leaves the skin with a starchy feeling, rinse with warm water instead of cold, dry and use some more cream, letting it remain on the surface over night.

In the gentle springtime there is a rush for hardboiled curls. Permanent wave emporiums become mad-houses of activity. Better take time by the cowlick now and give the old haid some hot oil treatments, which will so condition the hair that it won't be dry or inclined to frizz. Heat a tablespoonful of olive oil, apply with cotton to the scalp, friction in with finger tips, and, next morning, have a rousing old washout with thick, crackling suds and prolonged rinsings.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Friday, April 10

A day of disagreeable and disastrous occurrences is forecast from the predominant place of the major malefics in today's horoscope. It will be difficult to make much progress under the impediments, limitations and disappointments of Saturn conjunction Luna, and the moon's opposition to Mars increases the probability of destruction or perilous conditions, incited by personal impetuosity, turbulence and passionate indulgences.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year in which all may depend upon their own personal discretion, poise and deliberate control of disagreeable and hazardous situations. This embraces the probability of physical violence or alarm. Resolution, self-control and diplomacy may bridge over precarious conditions.

A child born on this day should be given a liberal education and early discipline, as it may be inclined to be impetuous.

FAYRO

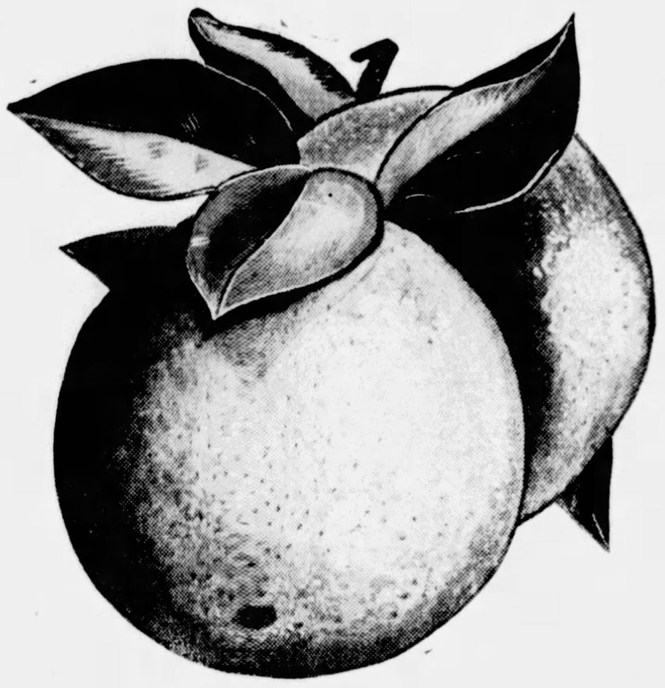
—DIRECT FROM THE GROVES

Coming to Pittsburgh!

Revolutionary as the manufacture of ice
Scientific as the pasteurization of milk
Delivered daily to your doorstep with the milk



UNLESS you have stood in a tropical grove and squeezed full-grown, tree-ripe oranges yourself, you have never tasted real orange juice!

The oranges you now buy are weeks from the trees. Necessarily, they are picked before they reach full maturity. If you served their juice to a guest from the orange country, he would know the difference immediately. The flavor is so different! It cannot be compared with juice from oranges that hang on the trees and drink up sweetness and healthfulness until they are heavy globes of natural goodness.

This is* real *orange juice!

For years, efforts have been made to bring you the juice from fresh, tree-ripe oranges. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent, countless methods have been tried. Preservatives have failed. Processes have fallen short of their magic purpose.

It remained for "National Dairy," after many months of scientific experiment and research, to bring forth its revolutionary achievement which now makes it possible for you to enjoy real orange juice for the first time in your life! It's the most sensational forward step since the transportation of fruits from one section to another began. It marks a new era in the habits—and pleasure—of the nation!

Science now squeezes oranges and freezes juice at the trees—nothing is added, nothing taken away

The scientifically developed quick-freeze process now brings you orange juice at the peak of its delectable flavor. It is real orange juice—the first you've ever tasted! Not a new drink, not a mixture of any kind, but the same orange juice you now drink, only riper and richer in health-giving minerals and vitamins, because of extra weeks on the trees in languid sunshine. (One of New York's leading hospitals is feeding "National Dairy" Orange Juice every day to 65 babies.)

"National Dairy" Orange Juice is squeezed from hand-selected, sound and perfect oranges right in the orange country. The oranges are peeled by specially designed machinery, so accurate in operation that a single soft spot in an orange automatically discards that orange. From the time of this special peeling to the moment you yourself pour out the golden juice, no human hand touches the fruit.

The "cream juice" in an orange is nearest the peel. And it is to preserve the delicate mellowness of this most desirable juice that "National Dairy" peels the oranges rather than squeezing them or crushing them in the ordinary, old-fashioned way.

Four and one-half minutes after it is removed from the fruit, this juice from oranges only a few hours from the trees is frozen under vacuum in the most scientific and sanitary way. Nothing is added—nothing is removed! In this convenient modern way, pure, tree-ripe orange juice comes to you.

Beginning Saturday—you can have an orange tree right at your doorstep!

"National Dairy" Orange Juice is vacuum-packed in convenient cartons. Just melt the icy-golden contents and drink the marvelous tree-ripe juice! The ideal method is to place the carton in your refrigerator for a full day; here it gradually returns to liquid. Pint size sells for 20 cents. Also to be had in half-pint size at 11 cents. Phone your order today! It will be delivered Saturday to your doorstep by your milkman.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Miss Munroe Has Home Wedding

One of the loveliest weddings of the early spring season took place yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the home of the James Duncan Munroes, of Stratford avenue, when their daughter, Elinor, became the bride of Gaynor Keeler, son of the William H. Keelers, of Albany, N. Y.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a delightful gown of ivory satin, fashioned along medieval lines, and a veil of plain ivory tulle, caught with orange blossoms, and she carried gardenias and lilies of the valley. Mrs. John L. O'Brien, of Albany, was her sister's matron of honor, wearing a charming gown of chartreuse green crepe, with a jacket having flowing sleeves. Her hat was of matching tucked grosgrain, and she carried a sheaf of Easter lilies.

The bridesmaids, who included Ellen McClay and Mrs. Bernard S. Horne, Jr., of Pittsburgh, and Catherine Meredith, of Harrisburg, wore similar summer frocks of chartreuse yellow crepe, with matching hats of tucked grosgrain, and carried sheaves of Easter lilies.

Mrs. Munroe chose fern green crepe Elizabeth with alencon lace for her gown, and the bridegroom's mother wore beige lace, with a matching hat of straw. Both wore brown orchids.

Morgan Keeler was his brother's best man, and the ushers were John L. O'Brien, Jules Ransom, William Welch and Hoy Horton Porter, all of Albany, John French, Jr., of Schenectady, and Lewis Greenleaf, Jr., of Loudonville, N. Y.

After the ceremony, which was attended by the members of the two families, there was a small reception in the inclosed porch of the home, which was hung with white draperies, festooned with sprays of southern smilax. The bridal table was in crystal and white, centered with gayly colored spring flowers.

The Keelers sail for Europe tomorrow, and plan to motor through France and Italy. Upon their return they will reside in State street, Albany.

Besides the William H. Keelers, the out-of-town guests included the Hartley H. Ramseys and the William S. Maloneys, of New York.

THE HOUSE DRESS BECOMES A FAVORITE FOR LEISURE HOURS

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, April 9.—No excuse for not securing one's leisure now. Not only are alluring pajama ensembles available to make relaxing a pleasure as well as a necessity, but we are now able to wear grand house dresses. Yes, the house dress has been glorified no end, and now we don't need to wear pajamas, negligee or just ordinary afternoon dress while at home, but we can climb right into one of these easy, comfortable and most romantic looking garments and feel ready to pay our respects to our household gods and goods.

THESE DRESSES are distinguished by splendid lines and clever contrasts of both color and material. Loose sleeves and a train often combine to give quite a moyenage appearance to the gown, thereby stressing the regal note that is so evident in gowns of this type. To those who want a change from pajamas or fluffy negligees, these intimate dresses should make a strong appeal.

WE SHOW ONE of Lanvin's new dresses for the intimate tea hour at home. Lanvin being the designer who has sponsored these frocks. The model sketched is of canary yellow triple georgette with wide sleeves of black velvet. The bodice has a cowl draping at both front and back. Superimposed piecings over the top of the skirt end in flaring godets which sweep the floor.

Music was furnished by Miss Helen Marquis, soprano, with Miss Virginia Fisher accompanying.

The legislative department held its meeting in the morning, joining with the educational group for luncheon. The morning speakers were Miss Bessie Kann, who talked on "Women of the Jury," and A. V. Snell, who discussed the city manager plan.

I can't tell you

Many a happy hour has been spoiled and many a hope destroyed by a condition none of us can ignore. We note its presence in others but never mention it. It is the cause of stained, ugly yellow teeth, decay and gum diseases. Authorities call it Bacterial-Mouth. The sensible way to keep teeth sparkling white and sound is to use the dentifrice that kills the germs that cause Bacterial-Mouth. That dentifrice is . . . Kolynos.

as ugly Bacterial-Mouth is removed

WHITEN

USE the Kolynos Dry-Brush Technique for 3 days—a half-inch of Kolynos on a dry brush, morning and night. Then look at your teeth—fully 3 shades whiter.

3 shades in 3 days

In 10 days the improvement will be so marked you will never again say that sound, sparkling white teeth are a gift received only by a fortunate few.

Dentists have long advocated the Dry-Brush Technique as the one way to use a dental cream full strength and keep brush bristles stiff enough to clean every tooth surface and massage gums properly. Only Kolynos permits this approved technique.

Multiplies 25 Times

This highly concentrated, double-strength dental cream is unique in action. It multiplies 25 times when it enters the mouth—thus a half-inch of Kolynos is equal in effectiveness to 12 inches of the ordinary toothpaste. It becomes a surging, antiseptic FOAM that cleans teeth and gums as they should be cleaned.

You can feel Kolynos work. It foams into every pit, fissure and crevice.

Germs that cause Bacterial-Mouth and lead to stain, decay and gum diseases are quickly killed. They vanish and the entire mouth is purified. Kolynos kills 190 million germs in 15 seconds, and more than 400 million in 60 seconds.

This amazing Kolynos FOAM removes food particles that ferment and cause decay . . . neutralizes acids . . . washes away tartar and the unsightly mucoid coating that clouds teeth.

Works for 3 Hours

Easily and quickly, it cleans and polishes teeth down to the naked white enamel—without injury. And for 3 hours after each brushing this cleansing, purifying process continues.

So long as you use the Kolynos Dry-Brush Technique, teeth will remain gleaming white and sound, gums will be firm and healthy.

Look for Results in 3 Days

If you want whiter, sounder teeth and firm, pink gums start using Kolynos—a half-inch on a dry brush, morning and night. Within 3 days teeth will look whiter—fully 3 shades. Gums will look and feel better. Your mouth will tingle with a clean, sweet taste. Buy a tube of Kolynos.

The SECRET SIX—By FRANCES MARION

the slaughterhouse. But if you ain't got the guts—"

"You know it ain't that," retorted Scorpio. "But I was figuring—and I'd rather have a belly full of grub than bullets."

"You got an idea this racket is worse than it really is," the Gouger interceded. "We ain't runnin' any risks. We never sell nothin' here in the steak house, and everybody knows it. That makes this joint a safe hangout. The still and our plant of booze is three blocks away from here and nobody's hep to it. We ain't lookin' for no trouble, but we just want a guy who can shoot straight if he has to—that's all."

"The game's new yet," added Franks. "It's only been two years since prohibition, and the business will grow. We cleaned up a hundred and fifty bucks last week."

Scorpio gasped.

"Apiece?"

"Sure—that's nothing. It'll be three centuries next week easy."

"All you gotta do is sell to the guys in the slaughterhouse and help us a little on deliveries. We cut you in one-third with us. Softer than sledging steers, ain't it?"

Ruse Is Successful

Scorpio's brows wrinkled in deep ridges, as his none-too-active mind grappled with the idea. A hundred and fifty a week! He counted on his fingers under the table. Hell! That was a month's wages in a week!

A movement in another booth caught his attention. As he looked up, a woman passed the booth. She was a tall blonde, rather handsome in her own hard way. Scorpio remembered seeing her before—"Peaches," they called her. Johnny Franks' moll. Slaughterhouse grinned fatuously.

"That," he proclaimed, to nobody in particular, "is what I call plenty Mamma!"

As he peered after her receding form, a gleam of resolve crept into his eye. He turned to Franks.

"I'm with you," he announced briefly. "Gimme a rod!"

A ghost of a smile crossed Franks' face at Scorpio's decision. With the suggestion of a wink, he glanced at the Gouger. Both knew that the woman's appearance had been timed with skill, to help enlist Scorpio. This wasn't the first time "Peaches" had acted as a "come-on."

Despite her thirty-odd years, "Peaches" retained a semblance of her fading youth, and wore clothes that set off her bold good looks. When her cold, impassive face lit up with a rare smile, there was about her an aura of real beauty. Frequently she had lured men to play into Franks' hands—to find later that there was peril in his ugly jealousy.

Joins Gangsters

Franks issued a quick order to the Gouger.

"We'd better shove off, and take Scorpio along. He might as well start getting wised up right now."

Scorpio, whose eyes had been searching for another glimpse of "Peaches," rose reluctantly. The Gouger dragged two suitcases from under the table, and motioned to Scorpio to follow. Franks led the way to the alley door, and they stepped out into the thickening fog.

The street lights were barely discernible, as the trio crossed the alley. Johnny Franks chuckled.

"Lousy weather—that's a good break for us," he remarked. They proceeded up to the corner of the main street and started toward the river front.

Three blocks away, they paused before an old, deserted tenement, whose bulk rose before them shadowy in the fog. Johnny led the way down the narrow alley to the back of the place. Prying loose a board from the fence, he sidled into the yard, followed by the Gouger and Scorpio. Weeds grew rank. In the shadow of a pile of old packing cases stood a ramshackle auto. The men quickly crossed the yard and paused before a low door, almost indiscernible in the gloom, leading to the cellar in the rear of the tenement. Johnny tapped lightly, and a gleam of light shone as a wicket was opened. An eye, distorted by thick-lensed glasses, appeared, blinked—and the door swung open. Franks, followed by Scorpio and the Gouger, stepped into the dark cellar. They groped their way through a short passage, descended a few steps and walked into another cellar.

The place was lighted only by a dim blue flame which flickered under a great simmering still. As Scorpio's eyes became accustomed to the gloom, he glanced nervously about him. The squat black boiler sent up a cloud of noxious steam. Copper tubes connected the boiler to coils. Beneath the coils, large glass bottles received the murky liquid that dripped in a steady stream.

The walls were lined with sacks of corn sugar, and large barrels from which issued the reek of fermenting mash. An old bath-tub adjoined the still. A man was busily engaged in stirring the reeking substance within it with an old broom.

Underfoot was a thick layer of mash, rotting and fermenting. A rat scurried across the floor and sought refuge behind a packing-case. Cobwebs hung thick. On a table in the corner were a barrel and siphon, and beside several dozen pint bottles, filled with a cludy amber fluid, stood funnel and corking machine.

"Jeez!" muttered Scorpio. "This ain't no flower-garden."

"Mash stinks," explained Franks. "That's why we have it in this vacant joint where it can't be spotted. We move in the corn sugar at night, ferment it with syrup and yeast, and distill it off. Makes a darn good grade of corn hootch when it's colored and flavored up a little with burnt sugar. We get three a pint for it. And we make a little alky, too—distilling off rubbing alcohol."

That reminded him of something. He turned to the man at work at the bathtub, as the Gouger, motioning Scorpio to help, began packing pint bottles into the suitcases. The wizened, spectacled man who had admitted them to the place came forward and began wrapping bottles in sheets of newspaper. The Gouger pointed to Scorpio, made a few signs, and the little man grinned.

"This is Metz," explained the Gouger. "He helps around here and is the lookout. You can't talk to him—he's a dummy—but he'll know you from now on." The little fellow nodded confirmation.

Franks' voice suddenly cut in.

"You've been selling alky to that Colimo gang again!" he accused the man at the bathtub. Drawing back his fist, he sent the fellow crashing to the floor, whimpering and muttering denials.

"Do it again," Johnny warned, "and you'll be on a slab—on ice."

Scorpio peered at the fellow, and recognized him. It was Vronski, the Russian agitator, who had been slinking about the stockyards lately, spreading propaganda. He'd seen him downtown, too, where he passed as "Jimmy Delano." Scorpio grinned. He was learning fast. Here was a guy supposed to be a goofy Red, and who was really a bootlegger.

He turned to the task of filling the suitcases again, when a muffled crash, from the front of the building, startled the men to attention.

Another—and another.

Then the scream of a siren!

Johnny Franks, with a quick move, upset the table loaded with bottles, and motioned the dummy, Metz, who dashed ahead, throwing open the door to the alley exit.

"Come on! Take it on the lam!" roared Franks.

POPULARITY OF CHEAP CUTS OF MEAT IS GROWING

Due to New Idea in Seasoning Meat with Sugar as Well as Salt

Never before has such attention been paid to cooking inexpensive meat. By slow cooking and thoughtful seasoning many housewives have surprised themselves with tasteful meat dishes at low cost.

Among the various methods now in vogue, the use of sugar and salt in perfecting the flavor of the meat is gaining in favor. Some cooks add equal parts of salt and sugar to the pot-roast or stew. Others use these ingredients in quantities to suit their taste.

The economy of this simple seasoning lies in the fact that it develops a fine flavorful meat dish without requiring the use of a wide variety of vegetables and sauces. Often the cost of these supplementary ingredients offsets the saving made at the meat market. Most foods are more delicious with sugar. The Sugar Institute.

Pittsburgh Boy Coming With Jane Cowl in 'Twelfth Night'

By GEORGE SEIBEL

When Jane Cowl brings "Twelfth Night" to Pittsburgh next week the important role of Sir Andrew Aguecheek will be played by a Pittsburgh boy—Arthur Hohl, who was born on Mt. Washington and lived here until he started for Broadway to "be an actor." Now he is an actor, having had probably the longest run ever recorded on Broadway, when he played the principal role in "White Cargo," the play made from the novel of another Pittsburgher, Ida Vera Simonton.

George Seibel

Arthur Hohl's father, a mining engineer of international standing, lived in Pittsburgh for at least 25 years. He came to me one day and told me of his son's ambition. "He thinks he's an actor, and the only way to convince him he isn't is to let him go to New York and find out. But—if he is—I want him to have a chance."

Equipped with letters to David Belasco and the Pittsburgh playwright, Edward Locke, author of "The Climax," young Sir Arthur started for New York.

He returned in a year or two with Frances Starr's company, playing "The Case of Becky," Locke's play, under Belasco's management.

"What part are you playing?" I asked Arthur.

"I haven't any part, and I have all," he answered. "I'm understudy for all the men—it's a small cast—and if one of them doesn't soon get sick or die, I'll buy a bottle of poison."

Arthur Hohl is now one of the most highly rated men on Broadway. He rarely reaches the road. The last time he was here as the district attorney in "The Trial of Mary Dugan."

BIRTHDAY IN ADVANCE

Jane Cowl's week will be the first taste of Shakespeare Pittsburgh has had this season, but we may have two weeks of Fritz Leiber next year. Miss Cowl comes here a week too soon to make it a birthday celebration, the Bard's anniversary being on April 23, but better early than not at all.

Leiber's Civic Shakespeare Society is doing a great work for Chicago in promoting Shakespearean studies. Last season they offered prizes for the best list of books to make a Shakespeare One-Foot Shelf. The following, costing altogether $16.85, were finally selected:

"Shakespearean Playhouses," by Joseph Quincy Adams.

"Shakespearean Tragedy," by A. C. Bradley.

"Development of Shakespeare as a Dramatist," by George Pierce Baker.

"Life of William Shakespeare," by Sidney Lee.

"Character Problems in Shakespeare's Plays," by L. L. Schucking.

These five works do not occupy 12 inches, but they can be condensed still more by getting "William Shakespeare," by George Brandes, the best book about Shakespeare ever written.

COMING BOOK ON BOOTH

Among books to be published this spring is one entitled "Behind the Scenes with Edwin Booth," by Katherine Goodale, whose husband was for a half century dramatic critic of the Detroit Free Press.

As Kitty Molony she was the "juvenile" in Edwin Booth's company during the season of 1886-87. Minnie Maddern Fiske says of the forthcoming book:

"The whole theater grows large in the genius, the art, and character of this man. Particularly, the book should be an inspiration to the youth of the stage. Here we have a rare record of a complete season, day by day, picturing our great genius of the theater in his dressingroom, in the wings, in his private car. One is literally taken back of the curtain of the tragedian's life on tour. And it is delightful to know that one is permitted to share intimately a memory of Edwin Booth's happiest season in the theate."

Mad-Cap

Mary Pickford is said to do the title role of "Kiki," film coming to the Aldine tomorrow with a roguish, mad-cap gesture.

Westinghouse Names Head at Cleveland

F. G. Hickling, transportation manager of the central district organization for the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, has been appointed manager of the Cleveland office, according to officials of the company. Hickling succeeds J. Morris Ireland, who has been appointed special representative of the company.

Cleveland Artist To Lecture Tonight

"The Magic Realm of Art" will be discussed tonight in the Lecture Hall of Carnegie Institute by Henry Turner Bailey, former director of the Cleveland Art School. The lecture is given under the auspices of the Department of Fine Arts.

JANE COWL TO BRING SHAKESPEARE AND 'SKIPPY' STAYS

The role of Viola in Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night," which will be played by Jane Cowl in the Alvin, next week, is regarded by many historians of the theater as the first part that was ever performed by a woman on the English stage. After the enfranchisement of women on the stage by Charles II. in 1662, Mrs. Anne Marshall audaciously took the role in a revival at Lincoln's Inn Fields, in 1663. Until that time, it had bee considered improper in England for a woman to appear on the stage, and female parts were taken by boys with soprano voices.

"Skippy" has proved to be so popular with patrons that Managers Cool, of the Fulton, and Hooley, of the Sheridan Square, have decided to extend the engagement. Consequently the picture will be shown through Friday and Saturday, in both theaters, instead of closing today. It features Jackie Cooper and Mitzi Green. The coming picture, in each of these houses, will be "It Pays To Advertise," with Carole Lombard, Norman Foster and Skeets Gallagher, opening next Monday, to show for four days only.

"Death Takes a Holiday" will be repeated in the Pitt next week. Paul McGrath and Anne Forrest will again be seen in the roles of Prince Sirki and Grazia.

NEW SHOWS TOMORROW

"Trader Horn" will open a second week in the Nixon Monday. This film version of the African jungle story of the same name has Edwina Booth and Harry Carey as its featured players.

Robert Montgomery plays in support of Norma Shearer for the third time in "Strangers May Kiss," her latest starring vehicle, opening tomorrow in the Penn. Ted Claire will be on the stage.

Not one feature on the "Take a Chance" week show opening in the Stanley Tomorrow is being advertised. The screen feature is to be a picture that has not yet been shown anywhere in Pennsylvania before.

Conrad Nagel, Bette Davis, Sidney Fox and Slim Summerville head the cast of Booth Tarkington's latest screen story, "Bad Sister," coming to the Davis Saturday and to the Enright tomorrow. Don Bestor and orchestra will head the program on the Enright stage.

"BEAU GESTE" SEQUEL

"Beau Ideal," film coming to the Warner Monday, is the sequel to "Beau Geste" and was written by P. C. Wren. Ralph Forbes and Loretta Young head the cast.

Mary Pickford has returned to the madcap, spitfire type of characterization that made her famous in "Kiki," coming tomorrow to the Aldine screen.

The Harris, beginning Saturday, will reduce its prices for the week, all seats on the first floor and balcony being 25 cents, morning, afternoon and night for everyone. Seats in the second balcony will remain at 10 cents. The pictures will be "Girls Demand Excitement" and "The Ridin' Fool."

Tommy "Bozo" Snyder, long a popular comedian in burlesque, will head his own show, "Follies of the Day," in the Academy, beginning Sunday midnight. Sam Green and Gertrude Hays will support him, in addition to the Academy's own cast headed by Billy Hagan and Margie Bartel.

Walter Winchell Will Be Found On Page 10

New Face

Bette Davis, heroine in "Bad Sister," coming tomorrow to the Enright and Saturday to the Davis, is a screen newcomer.

EXTRAS IMPORTANT AS STARS, IS VIEW

Extra players are just as important to the success of a motion picture as the stars, according to Josef von Sternberg, director of "Morocco" and "Dishonored."

"Atmosphere players are the human background for the drama," he says. "Faulty environment means a bad picture. On the other hand, an authentic and believable background adds realism to the foreground.

"Nothing invented by man can detect flaws as quickly, or expose them as relentlessly, as a motion picture camera. One player who is out of the mood of a scene; one person in a crowd, can make the whole scene out of key. One false stroke of a pen can ruin an otherwise perfect etching. One unconvincing gesture or expression can do the same for an entire motion picture sequence. That is why I hand-pick every extra as well as every principal in my casts."

John Gilbert Sued On Film Authorship

LOS ANGELES, April 9.—(AP.)—John Gilbert, actor, Frances Marion, scenarist, and the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio were named co-defendants in a suit for $1,100,000 damages filed by Ina Kuhn, who claimed authorship of the idea of "a wicked hero with a face like an angel" such as Gilbert played in "Mask of the Devil."

Miss Kuhn asks $100,000 actual damages for being "deprived of her property rights," and $1,000,000 punitive damages.

FOCH DESCRIBES ROUT OF BRITISH FIFTH ARMY

BREAK IN LINE PRESAGED DISASTER

to the arrangements previously made—that is to say, dispatch the French 3rd Army to the British zone.

However, in view of the time required to effect the move, the action of this army could not be fully felt before the 27th. Until then, the British would have to be left more or less to themselves.

In order to lessen in part the gravity of their situation, the French Commander-in-Chief, in agreement with Marshal Haig, decided to entrust General Fayolle, commanding the group of Armies of the Reserve, with the conduct of the battle between Barisis-aux-Bois and Peronne.

Great Gap Opened

General Fayolle therefore had under his command the British divisions which were fighting in that area, the French Third Army on its arrival, and ultimately the French First Army, which was at that moment being withdrawn from the region of the Woevre. He was instructed to establish at all costs a solid defensive front on the line Peronne-Guiscard-Chauny-Barisis-aux-Bois, or at the very least on the line Nesle-Noyan.

However, events marched with a rapidity that defied all calculations. On March 23 the Germans extended their front of attack to the east of Arras. The British Third Army, apart from a slight withdrawal west of Croisilles, successfully repulsed all the enemy's assaults, but in order to maintain contact with the Fifth Army, it was obliged to draw back its right in the direction of Bapaume.

The British 5th Army continued its retreat without interruption. On the 23rd, it abandoned the bridge-head at Peronne and the next day the line of the Somme from Peronne to Ham. In vain the French 5th Corps (3rd Army), hurrying into action, tried to defend Noyon and the Canal du Nord; it was outflanked, and on the 25th, Noyon fell into the hands of the Germans.

What had happened was that Gen. Gough's right, instead of retiring in the direction of Roye-Montdidier, which would have kept it in touch with the French left, retreated toward Nesle and Amiens, thus drawing away from the French and moving in the direction of the English bases. In this way there was created between the British right and the French left a gap of some two miles in width. Our 2nd Cavalry Corps, in spite of all its efforts, was unable to stop this breach, and through it the enemy advanced rapidly.

General Fayolle counted on throwing into it the units of the Third Army as they detrained; but the question was, would he have time to do so, and if the breaking up of Gough's Army continued, would not these arriving units themselves be carried away by the torrent before they could re-establish the continuity of the front?

Grave Decision Made

The French Commander-in-Chief, who had seen Field Marshal Haig at Dury on the 23d and had declared himself in accord with the latter as to the necessity of maintaining a close liaison between the British and French armies, now doubted whether this contact could be re-established.

In view of the developments of the 24th, he despaired of the British resisting sufficiently to enable the French divisions to come into action under favorable conditions on the right of the British Fifth Army, and he considered that fresh dispositions were now required to meet the situation.

These views he communicated the same day, March 24, to the commanders of the various groups of armies, in the following instructions:

"It is above all essential," he wrote, "that the armature of the French armies taken as a whole be solidly maintained; in particular the group of Armies of the Reserve must not be cut from the remainder of our forces. This being assured, maintain contact with the British forces if possible . . ."

This was a grave decision, one which appeared to guard imperfectly the interests of the Allies; moreover, it threatened to deal a fresh blow to the morale of the British troops, already so gravely affected.

The following day, March 25, Field Marshal Haig, at Abbeville, handed General Weygand a note in which he set forth his requests and his intentions. His requests had for their object the immediate concentration "astride the Somme, west of Amiens, of at least twenty French divisions for the purpose of acting against the flank of the German attack on the British Army." This was equivalent to a decision to transfer the British resistance to the west of Amiens. His intentions were expressed in this simple sentence: "The British Army must fight, falling back slowly and covering the Channel ports."

Individual Interests

As can be seen, the moment a violent and sustained crisis suddenly broke, each of the two commanders-in-chief saw himself faced by the responsibility he owed to his own country, and precisely what was to be feared happened. Each was concerned most of all with preserving and maintaining his army, he therefore oriented it towards its bases, the direction best calculated to protect his own nation's interests.

For the British, this direction was the Channel ports, for the French it was Paris and the interior of France; to each this appeared as the essential task. The result perhaps would be a divergent maneuver, but to help his neighbor was no longer anything but a contingent duty, to be fulfilled if possible.

As opposed to a single German battle, two distinct battles were being fought by the Allies: A British battle for the ports and a French battle for Paris. These were carried on separately and farther and farther away from one another. The Allied commanders thus tended to emphasize the separation of their armies the primary object of the German operations. And they risked rendering the separation absolute.

Advises Clemenceau

Unless the Allied governments, upon whom rested most of the responsibility for what was happening, intervened quickly and energetically, we WERE MARCHING TOWARDS CERTAIN DEFEAT. They must clearly affirm that the interests of the coalition come before everything else; to do this they should create an organ superior to their armies in the field and which would take in hand the safeguarding of the common interests and direct the united resources of both partners.

On Sunday, March 24, about 3 p. m., even before Gen. Petain had issued his instructions which were to put the seal upon the divergence between his views and those of Marshal Haig, I had, on my own responsibility, asked to see M. Clemenceau, the prime minister, and had handed him a note in which I called his attention to the evolution of the battle then going on.

I explained the military dispositions which should at once be taken and the necessity for "an organ to direct the war"—one capable of giving orders and seeing that they were executed. Otherwise the risk remained for the coalition of going into a battle entailing the gravest consequences inadequately prepared, inadequately equipped and inadequately directed.

His first words, when I gave him my note, were:

"You are not going to desert me, are you? I am in agreement with Haig and Petain, what more can I do?"

"No, Mr. President," I answered, "I am not going to desert you, but each one of us must shoulder his own responsibilities and without delay; that is why I have handed you this note."

As chief of staff of the army, I was military adviser to the French government.

[Gen. Foch was then chief of the War Department staff. The chief of staff of the armies in the field is designated in France as "le major-general."—Translator.]

Grave events were happening, and I could not remain passive when disaster was imminently threatening. The time had come for each man to assume his responsibilities, and it was most important for the French government to comprehend that the patriotic fervor of its Prime Minister (M. Clemenceau), his unsurpassed activity and his frequent conversations with Gen. Haig, did not suffice to carry on an immense, long and hard battle by the allied armies.

Necessity Recognized

To solve the problem, it was essential to set up at once a directing organ, which would be wholly and solely concerned with the conduct of the Allied war, which would be selected by and be responsible to the allied governments, possessed of the necessary experience, prestige and ability, and aided by an appropriate staff. Failing that, the struggle would end in division of efforts, impotence and disaster.

This organ could be neither the Versailles executive committee, which, on March 14, had been deprived of all its means of action and of all its authority, nor the supreme war council of the allied governments, for its decisions would inevitably be always too late to meet an emergency.

Field Marshal Haig that very day recognized the necessity. On March 24, about 11 p. m., when he could no longer have any doubt as to the intentions of the French high command, he telegraphed to the chief of the imperial general staff, in London, to come at once to France, in order that a supreme command for the whole western front might be created as quickly as possible.

In response to this appeal, Gen. Wilson landed at Boulogne on the morning of the 25th. He had been preceded by Lord Milner, a member of the British War Cabinet, who had arrived at Versailles the day before, under orders from Mr. Lloyd George to "send the Cabinet a personal report on the situation."

Taking advantage of the presence in France of these two British officials, M. Clemenceau arranged a meeting for the afternoon of March 25 at Compiegne, at French General Headquarters. Unfortunately, neither Gen. Wilson nor Marshal Haig was able to attend, both being detained at Abbeville.

The result was there were really two meetings on that day—one at Compiegne, at which I assisted with the President of the Republic, M. Clemenceau, M. Loucheur, Lord Milner and Gen. Petain; the other at Abbeville, where Gen. Wilson, Field Marshal Haig and my chief of staff, Gen. Weygand, assembled.

Warren William Looking Like Barrymore to Do Otis Skinner Role

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright 1931 by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, April 11.

With it's flair for noticing resemblances, Hollywood has labeled Warren William as John Barrymore's double.

William, who played in the Broadway production of "The Vinegar Tree," shows signs of being able to live down the handicap. He is Dolores Costello's leading man in "Expensive Woman," and will take the Otis Skinner role in the talkie version of "The Honor of the Family."

Dolores Costello

The young actor is the third whose profile has been likened to the aquiline features of Barrymore, Ian Keith, first on record, never cut much of a figure in the films, although he is profitably engaged at present in the coast production of "Elizabeth the Queen." Frederic March, who came out here in "The Royal Family," has lived down the resemblance and is booming along in his own right.

For talkie purposes, Balzac's story has been changed from the time of Napoleon to the late war. Bebe Daniels plays the leader of the gang of crooks whom Warren outwits, and Lloyd Bacon will direct.

A TOSS-UP

Harry Brand tells the one about the Hollywood director who got off the train at Reno.

"Well," he said to a friend, "shall we go to the hotel and wash up, or shall we go directly to the divorce court?"

LATEST GOSSIP

The way to bring down the Barrymore wrath these days is to refer to his new picture as "Svengagi" . . . George Fitzmaurice has been taken off Gloria Swanson's picture and now will direct Ronald Colman in "The "Unholy Garden." This is looked on as confirmation of the breach between Samuel Goldwyn and La Swanson . . . The unsung players who "stand in" for the stars have formed a vaudeville act which tried out last week as "The Hollywood Doubles Revue." Geraldine Devorak, Great Garbo's "stand in," was one of the featured members of the troupe . . . Recovered from a lengthy illness, Walter Brown Rodgers, one of the German schoolboys in "All Quiet on the Western Front," is back in Hollywood and will resume his career in the talkies . . . It is told as a positive fact that one of Paramount's highest executives, seeing Buddy Rogers in the rushes of "The Lawyer's Secret," exclaimed: "That fellow is great! Why don't we sign him up?" . . . These western stars! On Ventura boulevard is a sign reading: "Rancho De Bill Cody." . . . Lew Cody will make his fourth recent appearance at RKO-Pathe in "The Whoop-Te-Do Kid" . . . Gene Markey and Gloria Swanson are seen together these days at Hollywood functions . . . Fox is borrowing Jean Hersholt from M-G-M for a role in "Trans-Atlantic."

VON STERNBERG UNRUFFLED

Objections of Theodore Dreiser to the scrips of "An American Tragedy" fail to get under Director Josef von Sternberg's skin.

Returned from Lake Arrowhead where he has been on location with the "American Tragedy" company, Von Sternberg answered the author's charges in what was, for him, a mild manner.

"Mr. Dreiser," he declared, "is wrong when he says we can't suggest the psychology of 'An American Tragedy' in the length of my scenario. I asked to direct this picture because I liked the book, and I have treated it objectively—that is free of any influences.

"When we are through, I think we will have an interesting picture. It packs a lot of dynamite."

According to Von Sternberg, no scenario ever was written by S. M. Eisenstein, the Russian director. "He wrote a treatment," explains Von Sternberg. "That is an explanation of how he would approach the story. As nearly as I could see, it would have taken 50 reels."

Hold Man for Quiz In Jobless Fraud

M. C. Lake, 48, of Indiana, was held for investigation in Central Police Court today at the request of Postal Inspector George V. Craighead. Detectives told of a fake employment scheme by which Lake victimized hundreds of Pittsburghers in promising them jobs if they joined his Mutual Aid Society, which charged $1 per membership.

YANKS MAY HAVE 1931 PRIZE ROOKIE

THOUGH THE REAL test won't come until he is up against major league pitching every day, and while it is true that many a young recruit who goes through the training period like a cyclone winds up like a gentle zephyr, signs are beginning to point to Myril Hoag, Yankee outfielder, as the prize hitter in the 1931 crop of rookies. Many of the high-priced and loudly touted sluggers from the Pacific Coast League have been busts in the big show, but Hoag, for whom the Yanks paid the Sacramento club $75,000, shapes up as one of the exceptions.

Myril Hoag

This youngster climaxed an impressive hitting streak a few days ago by making three home runs, a double and four singles in two games at Nashville. In the second game he tore off two homers and three singles in five times up. Nashville has the weakest pitching staff in the Southern Association, and the rightfield fence is only 262 feet from the plate, but ball players say that anybody who can bat .300 even in Sunday school league must be a good hitter, and inasmuch as Hoag hit better than .700 he has convinced a lot of veterans that he has the goods.

IN CONTRAST TO numerous other recruits who start in flashy style and then peter out when the pitchers begin to put something on the ball, Hoag got off poorly but gradually found himself and then proceeded to go at a clip that has since made him the talk of the Yankee camp. Instead of falling off with the approach of the championship season he has continued to show steady improvement.

Of course, there's still a chance of a slip. It often happens that a rookie who looks like a find even for some time after the opening of the pennant race will eventually be discovered to have a fatal batting weakness. Then he blows up. But as far as he has gone, Hoag is said to look like the real stuff, and the Yankee management, fearful at first that it had been gypped out of $75,000, is now about convinced that it got the biggest bargain of the year in the baseball market.

AND IF HOAG keeps up present gait it will be another bit of evidence that form niceties do not mean everything. For his batting form was pronounced atrocious at first, and the clashing of his knees when he swung was a camp joke. But the roar of his bat has since silenced his critics.

They made fun of Al Simmons' stance, too, when he first broke in, calling him a water-bucket hitter who could not possibly last. And a guy named Honus Wagner was not the picture of grace or ideal form at the plate, either. Yet Wagner and Simmons and several others with unconventional batting styles turned out to be pretty fair hitters. Hoag may be another addition to the list.

JOHN M'GRAW, of whom you probably have heard, celebrated his fifty-eighth birthday anniversary on Tuesday, has been in baseball 40 years, and on July 19 he will begin his thirtieth year as manager of the Giants. His color has not faded with the passing of the seasons. He isn't the oldest manager in the majors, as Connie Mack and Wilbert Robinson are his seniors, and Mack has served longer as a major league pilot, but he is still the most colorful of all the skippers, and his record of 10 pennants is a mark that rivals will be shooting at for some little time to come.

Elmer Knetzer

ELMER KNETZER, Beltzhoover resident, is one of the oldest pitchers active in the minors, but he's still so good that they're fighting for his services. Manager Heinie Groh, of the Binghamton club, has requested President P. B. Farrell, of the New York-Pennsylvania League, to cancel a release given to the veteran.

Groh says that he gave Knetzer his release from the Binghamton club in order to help him get a job as manager in the Middle Atlantic League which the pitcher thought he could land. Elmer failed to get the appointment, however, and now Groh thinks the release should be annulled and Knetzer restored to the Binghamton club instead of being allowed to accept any of the other offers he has received.

ANOTHER PITCHING PRODUCT of the South Hills figuring in the minor league news is Bill Doak, formerly of Knoxville. A movement to lift the ban on spitball pitchers in the American Association is being sponsored by Branch Rickey, of the Cardinals, with a view to getting a job for Doak.

Rickey thinks Bill could win in that circuit if allowed to use his spitter. His plan, if the ban is lifted, is to give all the clubs, starting with the 1930 tailenders, a chance to bid for Doak's services, and if none of the others wants him, to turn him over to the Columbus club, a new Cardinal farm.

ONE OF THE football ideas evolved by the late Knute Rockne at Notre Dame which will be put into execution at the Naval Academy by Rip Miller, the new coach of the Middies and a former Irish player, is the plan of playing a series of games at the close of the spring practice session. At Notre Dame, games between dormitory and club teams feature the spring practice, the object being to give the gridders a better drilling in actual play. For the same purpose, aiming to give his players real match experience, Miller will split the Navy spring squad into four teams and send them against one another. These teams will be called Notre Dame, Princeton, Penn and Maryland, taking the names of four of Navy's main opponents for next season. The elevens will play abbreviated games on Wednesdays and Saturdays, the two leaders meeting for a full game late in April.

HUGH MARTIN, a southern matchmaker chosen to put over summer boxing at Madison Square Garden in New York at picture show prices for the purpose of developing new talent for Tom McArdle's winter programs there, says he gave Young Stribling his first match in Columbus, Ga., in 1921.

Stribling was only 16 then, and a featherweight. Martin matched him with Kid Keenan for the featherweight championship of the South. Stribling accepted a guarantee of $250, with a privilege of 25 per cent of the gate. The fight drew $1,750. Stribling won by a knockout in the fifth round.

BERNIE M'CAY, who managed the McKeesport baseball club in the Ohio and Pennsylvania League in 1908, also appearing in the lineup at second base and shortstop, and who was recently named as president of the Columbia (S. C.) club in the new Palmetto League, was held by the Columbia police at the request of federal authorities. The latter declined to make public the charges against the baseball veteran. McCay had been endeavoring to lease a playing field for his proposed club when he was picked up by the police.

Johnny Risko

AS MIGHT HAVE been expected, the bout between Johnny Risko and Tom Heeney in Toronto, Ont., in which Risko got the decision, was a miserable exhibition, and all that the fans got for their money was a chance to do a lot of hooting and booing, a privilege of which they did not hesitate to avail themselves. Why the boxing powers continue to sanction such matches, or why they don't put a stop to the operations of such worn-out battlers as Risko, Heeney, Paul Berlenbach, and others of that type, is hard to understand. Not only are these washed-up vets unable to do enough fighting to give the fans their money's worth, but the continued beatings they are taking may sooner or later have serious consequences.

JUNE 23 SET FOR BOUT IN STADIUM

PHILADELPHIA, April 9.—(AP.)—Fried and Fishman, Philadelphia promoters, announced today that Tommy Loughran, former world light-heavyweight champion, had accepted their terms to meet Jack Sharkey in a 10-round bout at the Municipal Stadium here on June 23.

Maurice Fishman, secretary-treasurer of the Arena Corporation, plans to go to Boston tonight to confer with Jack Sharkey and his manager, Johnny Buckley, concerning the proposed bout.

He said Joe Smith, manager of Loughran, had accepted his offer by telephone from New York, and that he was prepared to give Sharkey a "substantial" guarantee. He quoted Smith as saying that Loughran was anxious for another bout with the Boston Gob, and that he favored the stadium as the site.

The Municipal Stadium, scene of the first Dempsey-Tunney championship battle, accommodates more than 100,000 persons.

CLEVELAND GETS BOUT

CLEVELAND, April 9.—(AP.)—A flip of the pen was all that was needed today to give Cleveland iron-clad assurance of its selection as the site of the Max Schmeling-Young Stribling heavyweight championship bout.

It was understood a contract for the rental of the Municipal Stadium at a fee of $25,000 would be signed today by William Saxe, representing the Illinois Madison Square Garden Corporation, and George Bender, Stadium manager. They worked out the details last night at a conference with City Manager Daniel E. Morgan and William F. Carey, of the New York Madison Square Garden Corporation.

The 15-round go will be held either the night of July 3 or the afternoon of July 4. The date will be determined later and is expected to be formally announced next Wednesday at South Bend, Ind., where Schmeling is scheduled for an exhibition.

The contract, as drawn, provides that the promoters will pay all expenses above $12,500 in increasing the stadium's seating capacity from 80,000 to 120,000 and will split concession profits with the city.

CAMPOLO DUE SOON

NEW YORK, April 9.—(INS.)—Victorio Campolo, the giant Argentinan, will arrive here next week, it was learned today, to sign for a fight with Tommy Loughran in Madison Square Garden on May 15. Loughran has agreed to the date.

SPORT SHORTS

GREENVILLE, S. C.—(AP.)—An X-ray of the ailing right elbow of Travis Jackson, shortstop and captain of the New York Giants, was taken yesterday and showed there was no chipped bone or other serious injury. The doctors decided it was a misplaced ligament which had put his arm out of commission and believe baking treatments and moderate exercise will remedy the trouble.

TULSA, Okla.—(AP.)—Mrs. Lucille R. Thomas found her ownership of the Tulsa Western League baseball franchise slipping today. Jack Holland, Oklahoma City club owner, and chairman of a committee empowered to represent the league, announced he would recommend forfeiture of the franchise and said efforts were being made to find a purchaser able to finance construction of a park here in time for the opening of the season. Mrs. Thomas yesterday telephoned from Kansas City the outlook was "not very good" for obtaining financial assistance.

SEATTLE, Wash.—(AP.)—The University of Washington baseball team's tour of the Orient has been called off by Graduate Manager Earl Campbell, after failure to reach a financial agreement with Kansai University, Japan. The team's departure had been set for April 18.

DETROIT.—(AP.)—Elias Funk, outfielder for the Detroit Tigers, has been released to the Sacramento club, of the Pacific Coast League, with whom he was with the Tigers in Kansas City, will return to the Coast immediately.

NOME, Alaska.—(AP.)—An epidemic of influenza reduced entries by one-half as the Nome-Golovin dog race got under way here yesterday. Seven teams "mushed" into Golovin last night and will return today to complete the 158-mile races.

ST. LOUIS.—(AP.)—Jim London, claimant of the world heavyweight wrestling championship, threw Paj O'Shocker, Salt Lake City Irishman, here last night in an hour and six minutes, with an airplane whirl and slam.

CHICAGO.—(AP.)—Tony Herrera, of El Paso, Tex., and Steve Halaiko, young Buffalo lightweight, will meet in one of the supporting numbers to the Tony Canzoneri-Jackie (Kid) Berg lightweight title fight in the Chicago Stadium, April 24.

CHICAGO.—(AP.)—Heigh Ho! Helene Madison, 17-year-old Seattle, Wash., swimmer, has lowered another record. Resuming her campaign to gather up all women's records, the Seattle star last night trimmed one and three-tenths seconds from the 75-yard free style mark of :45.1, established in 1925 by Ethel Lackie. The accomplishment gave her possession of 14 out of 16 records.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.—(AP.)—More than 100 amateur wrestlers, coming from all sections of the United States and from Hawaii, are seeking honors in the National A. A. U. wrestling tournament which opens here this afternoon. Fifty-five bouts were scheduled for the first day, with pairings to be made at noon. The tournament will be concluded tomorrow.

NEWARK, N. J.—(AP.)—Four girl swimmers, representing the Los Angeles Athletic Club, arrived at Newark Airport at 7:10 p. m. yesterday, completing the coast-to-coast flight in 36 hours aboard a Transcontinental and Western plane. The girls, who will compete from April 16 to 19 in the indoor national relays and indoor National open championship races, are Olive Hatch, Josephine McKim, Jennie Cramer and Majorie Lowe. All are national champions in the 880 yard relays.

TITAN TRACKERS REPORT

NEW WILMINGTON, Pa., April 9.—With the return of students to Westminster College this week following the Easter recess, varsity track candidates have been ordered to report every afternoon in preparation for five dual meets starting the last Saturday in April. A squad of 40 candidates for the Titan cinder path team includes a number of outstanding performers, but Westminster lacks sprinters, middle distance runners, and distance men.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: AN ELEPHANT WAS SUPPORTED BY FOUR SMALL GLASS BOTTLES—In a test to prove the strength of ordinary glass bottles, four seven-ounce capacity bottles were placed on a wooden base and another wooden platform placed on the bottl necks. The weight of a 13,000-pound elephant sitting on th platform did not break the bottles, though one was driven int the wood. My drawing was made from an original photograp taken at the Toledo zoo, September 11, 1925. POLYCRATES THE FORTUNATE—Polycrates, the Fortunate, ruler of Samos (sixth century, B. C.) was persuaded to part with the thing he valued most for the purpose of appeasing the gods, jealous of his extraordinary and continuous good fortune. Accordingly, he cast a valuable signet ring into the sea. A few days later a fisherman offered him a freshly caught fish in whose maw the tyrant's ring was found. Polycrates eventually was crucified by Oroetes of Sardis, according to the account of Herodotus. JOHN L. SULLIVAN WON A FIVE-MILE RACE 12 OUT OF 13 TIMES—Sullivan, who was known as "The Marvelous Miracle Man, of Syracuse," won the Pastime Athletic Club five-mile race 12 out of 13 times in 1923. At that time he was 53 years of age. THE GLOW OF A FIREFLY—Although the deep-cloaked glow within the body of a firefly is wholly lacking in heat, it is 100 per cent pure flame. A gas flame is only 3 per cent efficient, an electric arc about 35 per cent of visible light rays. (Reference: "Jungle Days," by William Beebe, page 154.)

Richard S. Tufts, Pinehurst, defeated Richard Wilson, Southern Pines, 1 up, 20 holes.

J. B. Ryerson, Cooperstown, N. Y., won over Paul Carter, New York, 4 and 3.

H. A. Tryon, Elmira, N. Y., eliminated R. A. Stranahan, Toledo, 3 and 2.

S. M. Parks, Jr., Pittsburgh, defeated B. W. Corkran, Baltimore, 2 and 2.

Forbes K. Wilson, York Harbor, Me., eliminated R. G. Morrison, Pittsburgh, 3 and 2.

T. S. Taller, Newport, R. I., defeated E. L. Scofield, New York, 2 and 1.

MONESSEN HIGH GRIDDERS DRILL

MONESSEN, April 9.—Monessen High School gridders, W. P. J. A. L. champions, opened their spring outdoor training yesterday afternoon under the direction of Coach Preston Ditty and Assistant Coach Ned Culler with more than 65 boys reporting.

The coaches sent their proteges through a number of drills, giving them samples of blocking, shifting, tackling and passing. Coach Ditty's big task this fall will be the replacement of his backfield, which was wiped out by graduation. The stellar line, however, remains intact, and the Black and White mentor is devoting his time drilling the new backfield men.

SPORT VIGNETTES

From Ray Alvis, manager of Young Jack Thompson, comes word that the latter has vowed to quit the ring if he doesn't win back the world welterweight title in his third bout with Tommy Freeman, in Cleveland, next Tuesday night . . . Thompson, a California Negro, never should have lost that bauble to Freeman . . . . The decision in favor of Tommy in their clash in the Ohio city last September was one of the worst steals this writer's eyes ever have gazed upon . . . . The title was transferred on the word of Patsy Haley, veteran New York referee, after Thompson had won at least 11 of the 15 rounds of their battle . . . and newspapermen at the ringside were virtually unanimous in this opinion . . . At the time, Alvis claimed he was satisfied with the verdict, but now he is sending out plenty of literature quoting the scribes on the atrociousness of the decision, as a ballyhoo for the return match, of course . . . The welterweight title has been kicked and handed about more than any other one in recent years, and, since Freeman has been unable to make any money with it, the chances are it will be permitted to revert to Thompson.

Jack Thompson

Frank Doljack, former Wheeling Mid-Atlantic League outfield star, now up with the Detroit Tigers, has a kid brother, Joe, a pitcher and outfielder, who will play with Wheeling this season . . . Ethelda Bleibtry, the Helene Madison of her day, a decade ago, and a swimming star of the 1920 Olympic Games, now is married and living in Chicago, and has a young daughter whom she hopes to develop into an aquatic star in the years to come . . . Hailing from Brooklyn, Miss Bleibtry was a great sprint and backstroke performer, the forerunner of Gertrude Ederle and Martha Norelius in the limelight.

Joe Harris, former Pirate slugger, who signed yesterday to play with Buffalo, wasn't sure until recently that he'd play anywhere this year because of his ill health . . . Chicago got two breaks in one day when it was learned that Anton Cermak had beaten Big Bill Thompson in the mayoralty fight and that it had definitely lost the Max Schmeling-Young Stribling battle . . . And the bigger break of the two, if you ask us, is the latter.

The depression in Washington must be terrible . . . President Hoover has been drafted to attend the baseball opener in order to bring out a crowd. . . . The reason the Pirates ought to finish high in the pennant race that gets under way next week is because all of the consensuses of scribes' opinions rate them fifth or worse . . . John Kieran, New York sports scribe, is writing a book called "The Drama of the Olympics," already sold for publication next January.—HARRY KECK.

PLANK'S MOTHER DIES

GETTYSBURG, Pa., April 9.—(AP.)—Mrs. Martha E. Plank, mother of the late Eddie Plank, one-time star lefthanded pitcher for the Philadelphia Athletics, died in her home in Biglerville, near here, last night.

HOCKEY TITLE PLAY RESUMED

MONTREAL, April 9.—(AP.)—The duel between youth as represented by the Chicago Blackhawks, and experience in the persons of the Montreal Canadiens, is to be resumed tonight with the Stanley Cup, for years the emblem of the professional hockey championship of the world, as the stake.

Those two survivors of a long series of playoffs among the National Hockey League teams clash on the forum ice tonight in the third game of their final series. They divided the first two games in Chicago, each winning by a one-goal margin. The fourth game will be played Saturday night and the fifth, if necessary, on Tuesday.

LOCAL HORSE SETS RECORD

PINEHURST, N. C., April 9.—(AP.)—Donald A. of the Duquesne Stable, Pittsburgh, hung up a local record of 2:07¼ for a mile on a half-mile track in the first heat of the Dogwood trot yesterday, but lost the race to Coolidge, fast stepper from the Pine Needle Stable, Pinehurst.

Coolidge took the second heat in 2:08¾, and the third in 2:09½, to beat out the Duquesne entry in the feature event of the day's program of the Pinehurst Matinee Club.

RING TRAINER KILLED

MEXICO CITY, April 9.—(AP.)—Carlos Vazquez, who trained the Mexican boxer, Alfredo Gaona, for his recent fight with Tommy Freeman, was shot to death yesterday in the gymnasium of the International Sports Club here. Witnesses said Leopoldo Villareal, a traffic officer, shot the trainer during an arguiment and then escaped.

DECATUR, Ill., April 9.—The Pirates and Tigers carried their springtime diamond warfare into this Illinois city today. The two major league outfits spent a part of the night in traveling over from Kansas City, where yesterday the Bengals plastered the Buccos, 7 to 4.

In respect to the wishes of some of Andy Bednar's Nokomis friends, Manager Ens expects to use the strong-armed coal miner on the mound against the Jungaleers during a part of the game. The modest boy is a heavy favorite in his home town, Nokomis also being the home hearth of Sunny Jim Bottomley.

FRENCH TO PLAY

Larry French is likely to start in the latter phases of the contest.

Ens and his players were in no mood for fooling today. The fact that the Tigers have sunk the Pirates four times in six engagements offers no solace to the Freebooters. Before the long-drawn-out series got under way on the coast some weeks ago, the Pittsburghers' supporters were quite sure they would outplay their American League rivals. But the Tigers showed surprising fight and cleverness as they rode to their deserved successes.

TOUR NEAR CLOSE

The players of both teams are glad to know the exhibition tour is drawing to a close. The travel becomes weary toward the finish, and there will be no regrets Sunday night when the last game is over. The two clubs are scheduled to leave for Detroit tonight. A three-game series will begin at Navin Field tomorrow afternoon. The last series should be the most attractive of the set inasmuch as the Tiger fans are likely to be hungry to see the new team in action.

The Bengals broke an eighth-inning deadlock to trim the Buccos in the clash at Kansas City. The two teams delighted about 3,000 fans with a lively frolic, the honors being even as the Tigers came in for their licks in the eighth.

Outfielder Stone nicked Heinie Meine for a lucky double with one out in the eighth. Owen then singled off Grantham's glove and Wally Schang came through with WASHINGTON, April 9.—We are back in Washington and maybe it doesn't feel good. The weather is still slightly Republican, and if it goes three degrees lower it will have to pass its dividend. Still, Washington looks pretty good after you have played 500,000 gallons of tank towns. We took on the Braves yesterday, and we tackle the Phillies today. These are exhibition games to show the Natives how terrible a club can be and still hang onto a National League franchise. After we make croquettes of the Phils, we play the Baltimore Orioles as an antidote. The idea is to work us up gradually until we are ready to meet a big league team.

ALLEGHENY VALLEY LEAGUE ORGANIZED

Commission Orders Schools to Get Permits to Stage Mat, Ring Contests

LOOP TO HAVE EIGHT STRONG BALL CLUBS

By TOM BIRKS

With practically a new set of clubs in its roster, the Allegheny Valley Baseball League has been reorganized. At a confab in New Kensington, seven clubs applied and were admitted as follow: West Leechburg, Brackenridge, Allegheny and Pittsburgh Coal, Renton, Springdale and Harwick.

The eighth member of the loop will be elected this week. It is one of the strongest leagues in the district. Plenty of playing material is available.

WAGNER ATTENDS

Honus Wagner was the honor guest of the gathering, held in the offices of the New Kensington Dispatch, and the Wagner ball will be the official sphere.

Managers Pete Marko, Geisler, Ferguson, McKenna, Henzel, Patterson and Carrop were enthusiastic regarding baseball in the Allegheny Valley. The new blood in the organization probably will put it over with a bang.

Two big meetings will be held this evening. At Latrobe, Wagner will organize the Westmoreland County loop. Six clubs are enrolled, and two more will be admitted.

FINAL MEETING

At Monogahela, Mayor Stahlman, Joe Tabory and Floyd France will hold what probably will be the final meeting of the Monongahela Valley League prior to the season's opening. This gathering will be in the offices of the Daily Republican.

Anthony Demor and his classy club will be members of the Central League this season. Demor lost his star middle fielder, George Solters, who signed for Jeannette, but many other boys are trying for the outfield berths. A practice will be held at Sullivan Field, Liberty avenue, at 2 p. m. on Sunday. Any players wishing a tryout should report at the field, or call Demor at Hiland 3755.

DISCOLA TO RETURN

Demor announces Jimmy Discola, his ace pitcher, will be back. Discola was one of the outstanding youngsters of the sandlots last season and should be good in faster company. There is a chance Wagner will send him away.

Manager Cum Posey and his Homestead Grays are working out at Hot Springs, Ark. Word comes from the southern resort that the well-known Negro club will be on a par with last season's aggregation.

The Grays will continue to drill for a couple of days, then board the rattler for St. Louis to meet the Stars of the Mound City. A couple of games will be played at Wilberforce, O., and then the team will return to Pittsburgh to meet the Cleveland P. R. R. at Forbes Field.

The Dormont Club, of the City League, will have a strong team this year, according to advance dope. George Spiers, manager at Asheville last season, will play short, while George Frey will play at second base. Spiers now is a free agent, having obtained his release when the Sally League blew up.

Jacket Coach's Polices Are Criticized

Announcement yesterday by Roy D. Schooley, president and manager of the Pittsburgh Club of the International Hockey League that Charley Reid would be retained as coach next season and that the players would be subject to more rigid discipline than was the case during the season recently closed, today drew none too friendly comment from certain members of the outfit.

The players, in answering the charge that some of them had not given the club their best efforts, expressed dissatisfaction with Reid's program of discipline and his playing strategy. At least one of them is said to have averred that he did not care to play on the team under the same policy that obtained during the 1930-31 season and would ask to be traded elsewhere.

HEBE OFF CARD AT MOOSE

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

A change has been made in the second bout at the Moose Temple tomorrow night, due to the fact that Ace Hebe, highly-touted flyweight, of Cincinnati, has injured a hand in training and will not be able to appear. He was signed to box Tony Marino, of Duquesne. In their place, Promoter Apples Meyers has signed Steve Senich, of Homestead, and Don Frazier, of the Hill. The Hebe-Marino bout will be put on next week if Hebe is available at that time.

Ace Hebe

Ray Kiser, club-fighting lightweight, of Tulsa, Okla., who meets Eddie Brannon, local Negro, in the main bout, will arrive late tonight.

Howard Mitchell, of Cincinnati, who makes his local debut against Marty Gornick, of Whitaker, in their semi-final, claims five-round knockout victories over both Chet Smallwood and Ray Newton, and draws in bouts with Ralph Lenny and Joey Goodman.

Carl Montebano, of Braddock, and Carl Cesko, of Uniontown, middleweights, open the show.

Between Rounds

Joe Bazzone, of McKeesport, and Eddie Hebner, of Clairton, have been signed to box the opening preliminary to the Midget Weigart-Archie Bell bout at Motor Square Garden next Monday night. Mose Butch and Frisco Grande are in the semi-final.

Jack Williams, of Weirton, W. Va., and Mike Harris, of Aliquippa, welterweights, will box the main bout of Ray Eberle's amateur show in the Rialto Theater, Aliquippa, Saturday night.

Three smoker shows are carded for tonight. One of them, under the auspices of the Brookline A. C., in Allentown Turner Hall, will feature a six-round bout advertised to a decision between Tiger West and Hans Roberts, with amateur bouts rounding out the card. Another will be under the auspices of the Ninth Ward Republican Club in its quarters, 4116 Penn avenue, while the third will be staged by the Pasterious A. C., in Lithuanian Hall, McKees Rocks.

Rosy Stoy boxes Midget Fox, Lew Hardcastle meets Teddy Baldwin, Davey Siddons engages Ed Suer and Ed Ketchel battles Big Boy Perry in bouts in Philadelphia tonight. George Manley and Charley Belanger box at Denver.

The war over the right to stage wrestling matches in the Pittsburgh district has blazed forth. The commission has given the exclusive privilege to operate to one Arthur Sharkey, of Atlantic City, who plans to stage his first show in Motor Square Garden next Wednesday night and later will put on shows at Hickey Park, Millvale, if the thing lasts. Meanwhile, the Meyers Brothers are understood to be planning to demand the right to stage shows in their Meyers Bowl in North Braddock and another applicant for a license said today he is prepared to go into court and force the issue if a license is not forthcoming on his application, alleging a monopoly is being set up by the athletic commission in granting Sharkey, an outof-town promoter, a permit and entirely ignoring local interests.

ROCKNE ESTATE MAY TOTAL $125,000

SOUTH BEND, Ind., April 9.—(AP.)—Litigation over clauses in life insurance policies held by Knute Rockne appeared likely after his will was filed for probate.

The entire estate, termed "very modest" aside from the insurance policies, which were estimated to total approximately $125,000, was left to the widow, Mrs. Bonnie G. Rockne.

Vitus E. Jones, attorney for the estate of the famous coach, who lost his life in an airplane tragedy last week, indicated that litigation might ensue over the question of whether double indemnity should be paid on some of the policies. The policies provided for double payment for accidental death other than "death resulting from the decedent's engaging as a passenger or otherwise in a submarine or aeronautic expedition.

Plans for a memorial to Rockne were progressing, but James E. Armstrong, secretary of the Notre Dame Alumni Association, said the committee was not yet in a position to decide what form it would take. A field house was one of a number of suggestions favorably considered.

The Rev. Michael Mulcaire, C. S. C., vice president of the University of Notre Dame and chairman of the athletic board of control, said no decision had been reached concerning a successor to Rockne, but that an announcement would be made next week.

Hal Lee, outfielder, and Ace Elliott, pitcher, plus a couple of other fellows, are largely responsible for the Phillies' defeat of the Athletics in the annual city series. The Phils won yesterday, 6 to 2, making the series games 3 to 1 in their favor. The final game is to be played tomorrow.

Lee came to the Phillies in a trade after warming the Brooklyn bench most of the last season. He has been a consistent hitter thus far, getting his second home run in yesterday's tilt, with Lefty Grove on the peak. Elliott turned in his second series victory, holding the world champions to seven hits.

The score by innings:

Rockne Showed Promise As Orator From Start, Irish Gridders Testify

ROCKNE'S LIFE STORY—EIGHTH INSTALMENT

By WARREN BROWN

(Copyright, 1931, Chicago Herald and Examiner. Distributed by Universal Service.)

There is a suggestion from early observers of the career of Knute Rockne, that, at the outset of his activities, he was not the sparkling speaker, who became so familiar, towards the close of his life, to millions of listeners.

Joe Savoldi

I find it difficult to get his players of the '18-'21 period to subscribe to that sentiment.

One of his speeches to Norman Barry, when the latter did not know certain plays, and failed to admit it, has been told already.

Roger Kiley, moving up to the first squad, and very hopeful that he would be selected, at any moment, to go out and play a lot of end for old Notre Dame, reached Nebraska with the squad.

"I was on edge," says Kiley, "and ready to go out and chase Cornhuskers right back down town to Lincoln, and out into the surrounding country. I sat on the bench waiting, as the moment for the start approached.

"Finally Rockne snapped 'Kiley!'

"I jumped to my feet, fixed on my head-guard in a second, and dashed up to him. The big chance had come, at last.

"'Kiley,' said Rockne, 'I want you to go with this man, up into the press stand, and help identify the players'."

Harry Mehre's big moment, was somewhat similar to that of Kiley.

Mehre came from Huntington, Ind., and when the Notre Dame team was scheduled to play Indiana, all of Harry's relatives and friends were out to see him who was associated with the team that, until last year, Rockne always liked to regard as his greatest.

Mehre, it should be explained, was with it, at the time, but not of it. But he had hopes, and had communicated them to his relatives and friends from the home town. They all came out.

MEHRE "SELECTED"

Mehre awaited breathlessly, the announcement of the starting lineup.

Rockne's well remembered voice was heard, and Mehre has never forgotten it:

"He named the backs," says Mehre, and he named the ends, the tackles, the guards, and the center.

"'And Mehre,' he concluded, "will take the chains, and work with the head linesman!'

"And all afternoon," says Mehre, "there I was, in full regalia, working up and down the side-line, marking off yardage, in full view of my relatives and my friends.

"I had a dickens of a time convincing them, for a long time afterwards, that this didn't represent my sole connection with the Notre Dame team."

With this series of incidents, which tend to show that there was something to be said for Rockne, as an orator, even from the start, must be linked up with his Fogarty story, told so many times by himself, and retold by so many others.

There was a Fogarty, at Notre Dame, and the name Fogarty has since inspired the dancing feet of a nation with his "Betty Co-ed" number.

The Fogarty football history was not as complete as that of Kiley and Mehre, who did get on the team, after the embarrassing false starts above related. But the urge for Fogarty was no less than that for the others, and therein lies Rockne's story.

There are many versions of it, and Rockne himself varied it, from time to time.

FOGARTY GETS CHANCE

The "Fogarty" of the story was represented as a lad who went out for football, day after day, from his freshman year until his last days at Notre Dame. He was no star, but he kept on trying, hoping against the day when a break, and, latterly when a miracle might take place which would get him on the team, for even a single play.

And late in the last half of the last game of Fogarty's four years, there came a sudden shocking crash of players out on the field, a whirling, twisting mass of humanity. As it unwound itself, one player, a Notre Dame man, remained on the ground, his teammates crowding around him, while one signaled frantically to the bench.

Rockne's sharp eye swept up and down the list of substitutes.

"Fogarty!" he called.

And the player who had waited almost until the final moment of his football time at Notre Dame leaped to his feet, hurried to Rockne and awaited the command to go out there to fight for old Notre Dame.

"Fogarty," said Rockne, "get out there and give your pants to so and so. His own are ripped right off him!"

To the very end, Rockne delegated to himself the disposition of complimentary tickets for Notre Dame football games.

In his early years, he also looked after much of the sale of tickets, and more often than not he carried around pockets full of them and filled orders even as he was going through with his innumerable other duties in connection with his squad.

"He wasn't any bargain to any of us," says Mehre, "when it came time to ask him for complimentaries.

"I went into my last year on the team, before I ever got up nerve enough to try it.

TICKETS GUARDED

"Then I argued out with myself, that I'd been on that team long enough to rate two tickets. My father and mother were coming on for the game, and I went to Rock, prepared to demand my rights.

"I presented my case, or started to.

"'How many tickets did you say you wanted?' Rock interrupted.

"'Two,' I told him.

"'My God!' he burst forth, 'is the whole population of Huntington coming up as your guests?"

Just last fall, before the team left for Pittsburgh, I happened to be sitting in Rockne's office while his regulars dropped into see what could be done about complimentary tickets.

Rockne had something to say to each, in turn, but all left with the tickets they desired.

Most of them had relatives going to the game, they said. One of the boys wanted seven tickets, and went into a long explanation of the number of aunts and uncles he had.

When he had departed—with the tickets—Rockne turned to me.

"It's amazing how that fellow's relatives travel," he said. "But their number isn't fixed. He had 12 aunts and uncles show up for a Southern California game."

Into this ticket session came Joe Salvoldi.

"Hello, Rock," said Joe. "I'd like to get two for the Pittsburgh game."

"Relatives?" asked Rockne.

"No, tickets," said the greatest fullback of his year.

"That's a good one, isn't it? I'll have to use it, some time," said Rockne.

But he never did.

STATE IMPOSES USUAL TAX ON EXHIBITIONS

PHILADELPHIA, April 9.—(AP.)—The Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission has announced that hereafter all high schools, colleges and universities must first obtain a permit before they can hold boxing or wrestling contests or exhibitions.

The commission, in serving public notice, said it has been brought to its attention that some of the educational institutions have been holding such contests and exhibitions without receiving permits from the commission.

TO COLLECT TAX

Frank Weiner, chairman, said 5 per cent tax on the box office receipts would hereafter be collected from the educational institutions.

"We find that some schools and colleges are not properly equipped to take care of the contestants," said the chairman. "In some places the rings have no floor padding, for instance, making it dangerous for boys to compete in them.

"We have always felt that if an accident occurred in a school or college bout we would rightfully be held responsible, since the law empowers us to supervise boxing and wrestling wherever it is held in this state."

The commission also announced that no wrestler shall be allowed to participate in more than one windup match within 48 consecutive hours.

The purpose of this rule, Weiner said, is to safeguard Pennsylvania promoters of wrestling who may find themselves without a windup attraction at the last moment in the event one of the principals competed elsewhere the night before, was injured or otherwise incapacitated.

Paul Jones, wrestler, of Houston, Tex., has been indefinitely suspended. Failure to honor a contract with the Armory A. C., of Wilkes-Barre, was the announced reason for the action.

Five boxers were reinstated. They are Al Farone, McKees Rocks; John Montabano, Braddock; Jim McVey, also of Braddock; Michael Barron, Dickson City, and Calvin Reed, Philadelphia.

BILL UP AT HARRISBURG

HARRISBURG, April 9.—A bill to eliminate the control of the State Boxing Commission over amateur boxing and wrestling matches and exhibitions was presented in the House of Representatives yesterday by Representative Frank E. Hoffman, Allegheny.

The Hoffman measure, if passed, would free boxing, sparring and wrestling matches conducted or sponsored by colleges, high schools, amateur boxing clubs under jurisdiction of the Amateur Athletic Union and all posts and camps of the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and United Spanish War Veterans from regulation or taxation by the Boxing Commission.

VOLLEY PLAY TODAY

NATATORS IN TITLE MEET HERE TOMORROW

PITT IS HOST TO COLLEGE, SCHOOL STARS

By JESS CARVER

Tomorrow night the schoolboy and university splashers will inaugurate competition for titles in the University of Pittsburgh's seventeenth annual interscholastic and university championship swimming meet in Trees gym pool. Saturday afternoon the affair will come to its usual wet conclusion.

The think about these swimming meets is that the spectators have to take unnecessary punishment. Next to being parked near a big collie after he's had a bath and shakes himself nothing is more embarassing than to be standing very nonchalant at the edge of a pool and have a dizzy high diver go ker-plop in front of you. It's also very tough on light suits.

Fifteen high school teams will compete for the scholastic honors with Erie Central on hand to defend the laurels it won so handily last year. Other entries include Allderdice, Schenley, Carrick, Peabody, Connellsy, South Hills, Allegheny and Westinghouse among the city schools and McKinley of Canton, Clarion, Duquesne, Coraopolis, Erie Academy and Altoona.

The Tipoff

One of the very last letters written by the late Knute Rockne was addressed to Walter Okeson, commissioner of the Eastern Association for the Selection of Football Referees. An excerpt from this letter is contained in a recent bulletin sent out by Commissioner Okeson to members of the Association. It follows:

"Max, I compliment you on the fine officiating in our ——— game last year. It was as well officiated as any game I have ever seen. I want to congratulate you on the fine improvement of officiating in the East and I believe all coaches are appreciative of this fact."

It also is of interest to note that the same officials who hailed up the Yale-Georgia game last fall have been assigned to work the same game next fall. Commissioner Okeson, who requested to both coaches to assign the same officials for the '31 encounter, and the Commissioner was delighted to accede to the request.

The request of the Yale and Georgia mentors for the same arbiters is one of the many exhibitions of sportsmanship and sinking of prejudice by coaches during the past year and certainly augurs well for the continued success of the organization.

Jack Cherrier, backfield coach at Notre Dame last year under Rockne and Hunk Anderson, has received a contract from California, where Navy Bill Ingram, head coach next fall. Cherrier was offered a job at Columbia and at the Navy. He has not made up his mind definitely, whether or not to accept the offer, but has indicated to me that he is thinking seriously of moving his activities to the Coast.

Dan Dougherty, Henry Bloss and Dan Brickley are in New York today, attending the annual meeting of the National Basketball Coaches' Association at the Astor Hotel. The boys departed after the banquet here Tuesday night.

Bobby Jones' Golf Lessons

By Robert T. Jones, Jr.

American Open, British Open, American Amateur and British Amateur Champion.

Bobby Jones

Someone asked me the other day if I was conscious of looking at the ball with my left eye rather than with my right. I replied that I was not and that if I looked at the ball with either eye it was a habit of such long standing that I no longer thought about it.

"But," the man insisted, "I have noticed that you and Walter Hagen and a good many of the other fellows hold your heads in such a position that you appear to be looking at the ball with the left eye. Surely there must be some reason for or advantage to be derived from the practice. I should like to know what it is."

I confess that the very definite cock which I give to my head when preparing to hit a golf ball is entirely instinctive. I began to do it long before I ever gave a thought to style or the mechanics of the stroke. I believe the same thing to be true in Hagen's case. But several years ago I did have demonstrated to me the importance of the head position in its effect upon the rest of the stroke. I have never attached much importance to the "master eye" theory. I don't think it makes any difference which of a man's two eyes is the strongest or whether he gazes at any particular point on the cover of the ball. All that he needs is to be able to measure the distance and to locate accurately the ball's position. I am told that he can do this better with two eyes than with one.

TELLS OF TRICK SHOTS

Back in 1927, it happened that Joe Kirkwood and I were on the same ship going to St. Andrews for the British open. The captain of the vessel was kind enough to rig up a driving net for us on the upper deck and every day Joe and I would go up to hit a few balls. The practice was of no value, even with a gentle roll of the ship, but it did serve to prevent our hands becoming tender. But hammering balls into a net is dull business at best and finally Joe began to do some of his famous trick shots and, of course, I tried to follow him. Naturally, there were very few I could accomplish without more practice than we had time for.

But one series of shots which Joe introduced to me shed a good bit of light on this question of the position of the head. These shots were played with an iron. Three balls would be placed on the mat in line and Joe would hit the first while looking directly behind him, the second while looking into the eye of an observer standing directly across the ball from him, and the third while looking in the direction in which the flag or the objective would lie. That looked fairly simple, after locating the first ball, so I had a go at it.

CHIN-BACK IDEA SOUND

After a few trials, I could hit the first ball looking down the deck away from the canvas, and the second, looking at Joe standing at the other end of the mat, but the third, looking into the canvas in the direction of the flag, I could never hit, nor even make a respectable pass at it. With my chin to the front I found it impossible to turn my hips or to swing the club back at all. The most I could do was to lift the club up and back at the ball.

Alex Morrison more than anyone else I think has harped upon the "chin-back" idea. I am convinced that it is sound for it places the head in a position where it will not tie up the rest of the body, either on the backswing or in the act of hitting the ball. Whenever you see a first-class golfer hit a ball watch his head. You will find that he either starts his swing with his head cocked or else he turns it a few inches as the club goes back. And it won't make any difference whether he is "left-eyed" or "right-eyed."

a long fly to P. Waner that scored the winning tally.

Pitcher Vic Sorrell, who worked the entire game for the Tigers, then came through with a two-sacker to score Owen and the clever pitcher scored the third run of the inning on H. Walker's single.

Ervin Brame opposed Sorrell for five innings. When the Kentuckian left the scene, the game was at an even stage, each side owning two runs. Meine went to the mound in the sixth and was the victim of a couple of handle hits that led to two tallies. The Pirates tied it up in the eighth on P. Waner's single, a double by Traynor and a high throw to the plate that was meant to stop brother Paul.

Forbes

People Don't Rejoice Over Lower Prices

By B. C. FORBES

NOW THAT retail prices are down, what is the public's reaction?

Instead of exultation, one hears such comment as:

Mr. Forbes

"Things must be very bad. I bought such-and-such for so-and-so, the lowest price I have paid in years. It is a shame, isn't it, that business is so poor?"

Economic education certainly has made progress. Time was when housewives and others didn't worry about what was happening so long as they were able to buy at low prices. Today most of them understand that the low prices have been brought about by depression, and they are sorrowful rather than joyful.

In homes where there are grown-up children, it is unusual for all of them to be working, or working full time. Low prices are interpreted as a doubtful blessing at the cost of lost jobs or diminished weekly earnings.

NOT ONLY so, but the tendency in such families is to confine purchases to absolute necessities. This naturally tends to bring about curtailed production.

There has been a change, too, in the attitude of employers, especially small employers. The ideal condition, it used to be reasoned, was when there were more workers than jobs, because then it was easy to enforce discipline and to exact a full day's work. Also, no troublesome wage questions arose.

Today the majority of employers would heartily welcome such an expansion in consumption that jobs would outnumber wage-earners. They know that this would mean full-time employment and full-volumed profits, instead of cut time and cut profits as at present.

WHAT WE have gone through and are going through has taught us all a salutary lesson. We have learned that prosperity can be enjoyed only when others are enjoying prosperity. We have learned, moreover, that the fullest possible value must be given, including the fullest possible value in work. We have learned that stable success cannot be won by spectacular speculation, but must be earned by conscientious, sustained effort.

Furthermore, extravagance has been knocked on the head. This incident has just been related to me: Several people leaving a New York theater were about to enter a taxi when, directly opposite, they noticed a breadline. One of the party suggested:

"It doesn't seem fair to blow in money on a taxi. Let's give the taxi fare to those poor fellows and take the subway home."

This they did.

In short, we have been brought back to earth. We have become less thoughtless, more sympathetic. We have lost arrogance and gained understanding.

Until the next return of booming prosperity!

GENERAL MOTORS, I understand, is America's largest exporter. James D. Mooney, G. M. vice president in charge of the overseas operation group, talked yesterday of "three gross economic errors in relation to our foreign trade, two already committed, the third impending."

The first error was one of omission, to heed warnings that we could not continue indefinitely to export huge quantities of wheat, cotton and manufactured goods unless we made it possible for our customers to pay. The second error was one of commission, when we passed the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill and thus "slammed the door on many of our excellent customers who wanted to ship us goods in exchange for the goods we had sold them."

MR. MOONEY added:

"The third great error, the one impending now, probably will arise out of our lack of awareness to the fact that the great nations of the world are busy making trading arrangements with one another that threaten to leave America out in the cold. . . . We may be very sad as Americans, unless Uncle Sam wakes up and gets into the trading too!"

Financing of New Pipe Line Completed

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

FINANCING OF THE 867-mile pipe line of the Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Company from the Panhandle gas fields in Texas to the Illinois-Indiana state line, one of the outstanding projects in natural gas development, is being completed today with the offering of $4,940,000 of two-year 6 per cent Collateral Trust Notes of the Panhandle Corporation.

The Panhandle Corporation owns one-half of the capital stock of the Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Company. The other half is owned by Columbia Oil and Gasoline Corporation which is affiliated with Columbia Gas and Electric. The entire capital stock of the Panhandle Corporation is owned by the Missouri, Kansas Pipe Line Company which, in partnership with Columbia Oil and Gasoline, was responsible for the organization of Panhandle Eastern.

The present financing is for the purpose of providing for a part of the Missouri, Kansas Pipe Line Company's share in the line. The two companies sponsoring the project each agreed to advance about $5,500,000 to meet construction costs. In addition to this $20,000,000 of First Mortgage Sinking Fund 6 per cent Gold Bonds were purchased by the Columbia Oil and Gasoline Corporation.

Notes Carry Warrants

EACH OF THE TWO-YEAR 6 per cent Collateral Trust Notes offered today will be accompanied by a warrant entitling the holder to subscribe after April 1, 1932, and before April 1, 1936, for 10 shares of the common class A stock of the Missouri, Kansas Pipe Line Company at $15 a share.

The notes will be direct obligations of the Panhandle Corporation and will be secured by the pledge of one-half the capital stock of Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Company and 6 per cent promissory notes of the same organization or cash equal to the amount of the issue.

Part of Largest System

THE NEW PIPE LINE which will be built at a cost of about $40,000,000 will become a part of the largest natural gas producing, transporting and distributing system in the world now being assembled by the Columbia Gas and Electric Corporation. The main line will extend through the states of Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri and Illinois. Gathering lines and laterals are also being constructed. The main line has been completed from Texas to the Mississippi River. The major part of the system will be in operation by October 1. Engineers estimate that proven gas reserves controlled by the system will meet requirements for more than 20 years and that a potential market is in existence in excess of the estimated capacity of the line.

Contracts have been made to supply natural gas to the Missouri Power and Light Company, Illinois Power and Light Corporation, Central Illinois Light Company, Illinois Power Company and with industrial consumers along the line. The output of gas will also be used by the Columbia Gas and Electric Corporation whose lines can be connected with those of the new system at the eastern terminal.

Suit Unimportant

A SUIT HAS BEEN BROUGHT in Illinois by a stockholder of the Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line Company asking for the enforcement of alleged obligations of Frank P. Parish & Co., to purchase stock of the company and for the appointment of a receiver. Counsel for the company are of the opinion that the suit will not be successful and that, in any event, it should not seriously affect the business or assets of the company.

Dairy to Deliver Orange Juice Daily

Selection of Pittsburgh as one of the key cities in which the innovation of delivering fresh orange juice daily along with the morning milk is to be undertaken by National Dairy Products Corporation, was announced by E. J. Finneran, of New York, director of sales and advertising of the corporation.

Deliveries will start Saturday when samples of the juice will be distributed to the 77,000 Pittsburgh families comprising the retail customers of the Rieck-McJunkin Dairy Company, local subsidiary of National Dairy.

After distribution has been thoroughly studied in Pittsburgh and the other key cities, plans will be considered to extend the innovation to virtually all the 1,600,000 American homes served daily throughout the country by National Dairy subsidiaries.

WIDOW BROWN HAS A CALLER . . .

When Harry Brown died, Mary Brown, his widow, received checks for $50,000 insurance money.

Mrs. Brown, devoted wife, fine homemaker, ideal mother, knew just enough about business to be dissatisfied with a $2,750.00 annual income which her insurance money would produce at 5½%.

So when Mr. G. Harrington Richards called, to present confidentially his most unusual investment opportunity—beautifully baited on a twelve per cent hook—Mrs. Brown listened and lost.

Don't censure Mrs. Brown too severely.

Her real m was home—not Moody, Dunn or Bradstreet.

The vital mistake was made by Harry Brown in not protecting Mrs. Brown in advance against her own lack of business experience.

If Mr. Brown had created a LIFE INSURANCE TRUST—making us responsible for the management of the $50,000—Mrs. Brown today would not be teaching school.

Our Trust Officers will be glad to tell you more about the wisdom of the Life Insurance Trust.

The following information has been furnished by Mr. Ralph G. Crandall, President of Panhandle Corporation, and is subject to the more complete information contained in a circular, dated April 8, 1931, copies of which may be obtained upon request:

PANHANDLE CORPORATION

Panhandle Corporation has acquired one-half of the outstanding capital stock, represented by voting trust certificates, of Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Company, which is constructing a natural gas pipe line system, the main line of which extends about 867 miles (approximately 658 miles completed) from the Panhandle gas fields in Texas to the Indiana-Illinois state line. The remaining one-half of such stock, similarly represented, is owned by Columbia Oil & Gasoline Corporation.

The entire outstanding capital stock, represented by voting trust certificates, of Panhandle Corporation is owned by Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line Company.

SECURITY

These $4,940,000 Two-Year 6% Collateral Trust Notes are to be direct obligations of Panhandle Corporation, and are to be secured by pledge of:

(a) One-half of the capital stock, now outstanding, of Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Company, represented by voting trust certificates (the remaining one-half of such stock was purchased, in October, 1930, by Columbia Oil & Gasoline Corporation at a cost of approximately $9,700,000 cash), plus any additional shares of such stock which may be received by Panhandle Corporation in part payment for certain advances to be made by it to Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Company, and

(b) 6% Promissory Notes of Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Company and/or cash together aggregating not less than $4,940,000, including such Promissory Notes at face amount. In the first instance, the security described in this subparagraph (b) will consist largely of cash; by October 1, 1931, it is estimated, such security will consist entirely of Promissory Notes.

The 6% Promissory Notes of Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Company become due October 2, 1950; they are specifically subordinated to $20,000,000 principal amount of that company's First Mortgage Sinking Fund Gold Bonds, Series A, 6%, due October 1, 1950 (or to any bonds, not exceeding $20,000,000 principal amount, issued in exchange therefor); all of such Series A bonds were acquired by Columbia Oil & Gasoline Corporation.

Of the total stock and Promissory Notes of Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Company to be pledged, from time to time, as security for these Two-Year 6% Collateral Trust Notes, 40% of such securities are subject to certain agreements contemplating a possible sale of all or part thereof. The indenture under which these Notes are to be issued is to provide that, in event of any sales under such agreements, the trustee is to use the proceeds accruing to Panhandle Corporation in the purchase or redemption of these Notes; a sale under such agreements of the maximum of 40% of such securities would result in the retirement of this entire issue of Notes.

The indenture is also to permit the release of any of the pledged 6% Promissory Notes of Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Company against the retirement of a like principal amount of these Notes, and the release of any of the pledged stock of such company upon the sale thereof by Panhandle Corporation and the deposit of the proceeds of such sale with the trustee, to be used in the purchase or redemption of these Notes.

PANHANDLE EASTERN PIPE LINE COMPANY—CONTROL BY VOTING TRUSTEES

The entire outstanding capital stock of Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Company is in a voting trust, from which not exceeding 40% of the stock from time to time outstanding may be withdrawn, if required under the agreements of sale as above. The voting trust agreement provides for termination thereof not earlier than October 1, 1940, except by vote of a majority of the voting trustees. The voting trustees are Philip G. Gossler, President of Columbia Gas & Electric Corporation, George H. Howard, President of The United Corporation, and Frank P. Parish, President of Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line Company. The directors of Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Company are Fred W. Crawford, President of the company, and Francis I. duPont, Philip G. Gossler, Thomas B. Gregory, George H. Howard, W. G. Maguire, Charles A. Munroe, Frank P. Parish and Stanley Russell.

We have accepted as accurate the above statements, but this offering is made on the condition that no errors or misstatements therein or omissions therefrom shall give rise to any right or claim against us.

A portion of these $4,940,000 Notes, with warrants, has been placed privately; we offer the balance of such Notes, with warrants, for delivery if, when and as issued and accepted by us, subject to approval of legal proceedings by counsel. It is expected that delivery will be made on or about April 15, 1931, in the form of definitive Notes, or interim receipts of Dillon, Read & Co.

Price 99½ and interest. Yield about 6.27%

STOCKS RALLY SOME AFTER DECLINE

Market Purely Professional, Which Neither Side Found Particularly Lucrative

NEW YORK, April 9.—(AP.)—Professional operators had the stock market virtually to themselves today, but neither speculative faction found the field particularly lucrative.

Selling of the rails impelled a general sag for a time during the morning, but many leading industrials and utilities resisted the downward movement, and after midday, the list showed signs of rallying. A firmer tone in the commodity markets and a better demand for bonds were steadying influences. Trading was in slim volume, most of it originating with floor traders.

In the midday rally, early declines of 1 to 4 points were modified, and a few shares sold up a point or two.

The rail equities were apparently sold on publication of the final tabulation of February earnings by Class I carriers, indicating that income in the first two months of the year was at the annual rate of return on investment of only 1 9-10 per cent. The low rate of carrier earnings, however, has been well understood. The first few reports for March indicate little if any improvement as yet.

Among the first companies to report first quarter profits was Underwood Elliott Fisher, showing net of 94 cents a share, or about half the $1.89 a share earned in the first half of 1930. Cream of Wheat reported 81 cents a share, a moderate reduction from the 88 cents reported a year ago. St. Joseph Lead reduced its annual dividend from $2 to $1. An unofficial estimate of Radio Corporation's first quarter results indicated that preferred dividends had been earned. The company ran in the red heavily a year ago largely resulting from a bad inventory situation.

Wall street was interested in the oil states advisory board's recommendations to stabilize the industry, most important of which was an interstate compact for coordinating conservation measures. It was felt, however, that achievement of such an agreement would be a lengthy and arduous job.

Credit remained plentiful. Call money held at 1½ per cent. The Treasury's offering of $75,000,000 in 1⅞ per cent eight-month certificates was promptly oversubscribed, and banks are now said to be looking about for longer term investments.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Arrangements have been made for the sale of a New York Curb Exchange seat at $120,000, unchanged from the last previous sale.

SCREW & BOLT OUT OF 'RED'

Officials of the Pittsburgh Screw and Bolt Corporation declare that April is expected to be the best month since last October. The company is now out of the "red" after working at a deficit for the last quarter of 1930 and a portion of the first quarter of this year.

The expanding rate of automobile production has been a helpful factor in the organization's business. With a wide range of bolt and nut products the organization is not, however, dependent on any single type of consumption. Production of two types of the recently developed hollow steel aeronautical propeller is under way on a commercial basis.

The company is in a strong cash position, and over a long period of years has built up a large surplus. No change has been made in the dividend rate during the depression.

They ask cancellation of the acquisition of two subsidiaries from Lehigh Valley Coal Company and Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Coal Company and seek recovery of money alleged lost through these transactions. A receiver for Burns Bros. is requested.

Railroad to Try Cent-a-Mile Fare

CHICAGO, April 9.—On April 24 and 25 the Chicago and Northwestern Railway will experiment with fares of one cent a mile, good in coaches between all points on the system east of Missouri River, with a 10-day return limit, and also will sell round-trip first-class tickets, good in sleeping cars, at the one-way rate with the same return limit.

I. C. C. Questions Southern Pacific Bond Price

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The Interstate Commerce Commission has asked Southern Pacific Company to justify the price of 96¾ and accrued interest at which Kuhn, Loeb & Co. recently offered for sale the $50,000,000 issue of 50-year 4½ per cent gold bonds, due May 1, 1981, which the bankers purchased from the railroad at 94¼.

The commission expressed the view that the bonds should have gone to the public at about 97¾, since the issue was largely for refunding purposes and also because the carrier's 4½s due in 1968 recently sold at around 97.

Mary Lou Meets Travers, Consents to Marriage

XLVIII.

So, in the morning, Margaret Lorrimer came over and saw Mary Lou, alone, in a corner of the big drawing room where she waited for her, a small, rather forlorn figure, but with the scarlet flags of courage flying in her cheeks and her eyes bright and clear. Margaret went swiftly to her and took her in her arms.

"I—I thought you'd be—furious with me," gasped Mary Lou, "but I couldn't help it, Lady Margaret. It all seemed so unfair—to her—to Lorry. I had to try and clear things up, but you understand I never thought she would come out to Westwood. I planned to talk to you and beg you to see her and then to tell Lorry the truth. That was all."

"I know. No, I'm not furious. I was, for a few minutes," Margaret smiled, "but not any more. And it all worked out for the best."

She added hastily:

"But I'd like you to know, Mary Lou, that even before we knew the facts, even before everything was cleared up, I'd not only forgiven you, I'd been won over to your standard, and I was grateful."

Goes With Jenny

Later she asked Mary Lou to come back to Westwood.

"Your room is waiting for you; it looks lonely," she said, "and all your things are there."

"But," said Mary Lou, "my job is over." She tried very hard to smile, but the red mouth quivered.

"Come as my guest," said Margaret briskly.

"Please," said Mary Lou, "not yet. I suppose sometime I can—and we can laugh about it all. But not yet."

Margaret did not urge her further. She had plans of her own and consulted secretly with Jenny about them. The upshot was that several days later Jenny invited Mary Lou to come "gadding" with her.

"I've some shopping to do," she announced, "and you can go to your darned old school and tell 'em why you've been absent."

"I'll tell them I'll come back Monday," said Mary Lou with spirit.

"If you like, and I can't persuade you to stay," remarked Jenny carelessly. "Then, as it's the grandest day I've ever seen, let's run out to Long Island, and perhaps we can look in at Oakdale and Larry can meet us in town for dinner. How's that for a program?"

It was a very marvelous day. Mary Lou looked out of the windows. Spring was dancing toward summer on feet shod with the soft green of her season, her arms full of early roses. The sun was high and brilliant, and it was warm, but warmth with a vitality in it.

Spring, thought Mary Lou, is a hard season, really, and a cruel one.

They started out for town and early in the afternoon were riding together, Jenny at her roadster's wheel, on the Long Island roads.

"Do you plan to live at the hotel?" asked Jenny.

"Not permanently. It's too expensive. I want to get a furnished room somewhere," replied Mary Lou, and shuddered a little. A furnished room sounded so dismal.

"What will you do with your car—and Konig?" Jenny went on.

"Are you crazy?" Mary Lou stared at her blankly.

"Aunt Margaret told me she'd given you the car. And of course Travers gave you the dog. And where will you keep that horse of yours? Not, I trust, in a furnished room, though some might seem suitable."

"But," said Mary Lou, "I couldn't take them anyhow; they don't really belong to me."

Sees Travers

"Is that so? Well, I don't know how the car feels or the horse either, but they tell me Konig is a shadow of himself with missing you. You can't just accept things, accustom them to you, and then drop 'em again," said Jenny austerely.

She turned off into another road and, while Mary Lou was still pondering her last remark, stopped.

"Here we are," she said. "I heard there's going to be stunt flying today."

The Saturday crowds filled the flying field. Mary Lou got out of the car, a little bewildered. Jenny walked her briskly across the field, her keen eyes searching as she walked, and her gay tongue rattling on carelessly. Suddenly:

"There's Travers!" she cried, and waved.

He was standing by a plane, his new plane, and talking with the mechanic. He had arrived home on the previous evening. Margaret had known, too, that he planned to be at the field today.

Mary Lou's feet were like lead. She couldn't move, she couldn't run, she couldn't escape. She stood there, trembling, a little figurine of fear, a figurine, too, of wild rejoicing. To see him again, to hear his voice! He was coming toward them, quite serenely. He, too, had not dreamed. No one had told him; they had kept their word. But the minute he saw her he understood, he knew.

"Hello, Jenny," said Lorrimer. "Hello, Mary Lou!" He smiled down at her, very tall, very good-looking. "I'm ready to take you up for that flight," he said.

"Not me," Jenny said hastily. "I'm not keen on bird life. There's Larry," she cried and ran off to meet her fellow conspirator.

No More Pretensions

Lorrimer and Mary Lou stood together in the middle of that crowded, noisy field. Planes were above them, planes were coming down to rest, further away, and near them stood Lorrimer's great big bird, static, waiting.

"Will you come with me?" He smiled, whimsically. "In the old days I suppose one would say, 'Will you fly with me?' Mary Lou—darling Mary Lou!"

She whispered, "Lorry!"

"Why did you run away?" he asked her.

She didn't answer in words but she raised her eyes to his own. He said, swiftly:

"I know, I understand. It's you I love, Mary Lou. Everything is clear sailing before us. Will you marry me, darling?" said Lorrimer.

Mary Lou looked at him a full minute. Then:

"Are you sure?" she asked, slowly.

"Yes, I am sure. I have always been sure of myself, I think, but never of you. There were times when I thought—when I believed—But then, when I learned the truth, I wondered how much was you, how much the part you played. Can you tell me—now?" he asked, not touching her, his hands deep in the pockets of his flying suit, his eyes intent and waiting.

"Yes, I'll tell you," Mary Lou answered bravely, "but it will take me all the rest of my life."

He caught her in his arms, then kissed her wildly, careless of any who might see. But people were used to meetings and partings on the flying field. He cried out:

"Tell me then, begin now. You promised, once!"

"I love you, Lorry," said Mary Lou.

"And you'll trust yourself to me, always?"

"Yes."

"No more make-believe?"

"So little of it was," she said, "No, no more."

He whistled to the watchful but tactful mechanic. He lifted Mary Lou into the plane and settled her comfortably. He said:

"Larry and Jenny, bless them, can shift for themselves. We are going home. The landing field is ready at Westwood. Westwood ho!" said Lorrimer laughing. "We have to get there in a hurry, because we're invited to a wedding. Doc Dan's best man, Larry the only usher, mother will give you away, and I hope no one does the same for me. Jenny's your bridesmaid—we'll get the license tomorrow."

"Wait a minute. Suppose—suppose Jenny hadn't brought me to you today?" she asked.

"I would have found you tomorrow. Must I confess that I wired a detective agency from Wynnes' camp? Kiss me, Mary Lou, and let's go home!"

The propeller whirred; there was a beating of wings. Contact! Lorrimer leaned to kiss her again. His hand was on the stick and the mechanic ran back on the field. Larry and Jenny, not far off, looked up and watched, smiling. The great bird rose on its spread wings and soared off into the thin blue, climbing, climbing. . . .

Jenny and Larry watched it out of sight, turned to each other, laughed with a triumph of fellow conspirators, and walked to the waiting car.

"They've gone," said Jenny, straining her eyes.

"They're headed—Home," her lover told her.

DAILY TRUE STORY — Great Weather

Weather Plays Important Part in Romance

Cameo Lake was the color of a robin's egg.

White clouds drifted in it and tall, upside-down fir trees met the right-side-up fir trees at the shore edge.

Now and then a series of ripple rings danced away from the spot where a bass had come up to snap at some floating insect. More than the usual number of birds seemed to be singing.

Barry Ingram sat on the canoe landing, his battered felt hat, once white, yanked down over his eyes.

Mort Cummings rounded the point in his canoe and ran it lightly on the pebbly shore.

"Hi there," he said, cheerfully.

Barry made a slight gesture, to indicate that he was living and had heard him.

"Great weather," Mort called out, cheerfully.

"The heck it is!" growled Barry.

"Bah!" said Barry, or a word to that effect.

He got up, stepped into his canoe, shoved away and began to paddle as though the original residents in full war paint were after him.

Mort's wife came down from the bungalow and found him staring at Barry.

Barry Angry

"What do you know, Bee," he said. "Barry's gone a bit balmy. I remarked that it was great weather and he disputed me. He indicated that it was rotten weather, he even cussed about it. Now I leave it to you—"

"Barry has quarreled with Olive," Mrs. Cummings explained.

"That's too bad. But gee, Bee, that doesn't make it a rotten day, does it?"

Barry Ingram paddled up to the end of Cameo Lake.

There was a trout stream running into it, and a big flat ledge under a mammoth pine tree. It was a beautiful spot, with a small waterfall singing where the stream fell into the lake.

Barry looked at it.

He said something that sounded like "Helluva place."

That was because it was under this pine, on this ledge, beside this waterfall, that he had quarreled with Olive Dane.

He spun his canoe about with such a twist of the paddle that he almost snapped it. He paddled back to the landing.

The Merrimans and the Ostranders had come down for a swim.

"Hello there, Barry," Mrs. Ostrander called, "isn't this just one grand and glorious day?"

"Mmmmph," Barry replied.

"Sure this is great weather, Barry," Mr. Merriman called out.

"Yeah? I hadn't noticed it," Barry growled.

They watched him yank his canoe up over the pebbly shore and depart.

"Heigh-ho everybody, Barry's got a grouch," Inez Carter said, with a giggle.

Olive Dane came down with a tall, dark young man.

She looked all around and seemed disappointed. She introduced the tall, dark young man, a Mr. Unger. They sat and watched the bungalow residents having their swim.

Makes Good Catch

"I though Barry was here," Olive said to Inez.

"He was. He had a grouch, I guess," Inez answered, with a giggle.

Olive and Mr. Unger sat on an overturned canoe on the landing and seemed to be deeply interested in their conversation.

Mr. Unger was quite an attractive chap.

After a while, Barry came down again. This time he wore a disreputable sweater and had a casting rod with him.

He looked neither right nor left, but shoved his canoe into the water.

"Ugh," grunted Barry.

"Swell weather, what?"

Barry paused and stared directly at Olive and Mr. Unger.

"It's rotten weather," he said, savagely.

With that he shoved off and began paddling toward the narrows.

"He won't get a strike in the middle of the day," Merriman declared.

"If he does he'll never play it. He'll yank it over into the next state. I can tell by his looks," Mrs. Ostrander cried, with a shrill laugh, looking meaningly at Olive.

She was wrong. About four that afternoon Barry came back with three pickerel that were wonders.

Olive Dane and Mr. Unger were sitting in the double chair swing in front of the Dane bungalow. Merriman leaped over the rail of his porch and ran to look at the fish.

"Boy, that's luck! You sure got luck," Merriman cried, as he examined the fish.

"Ugh," Barry answered.

"You still hold the prize for the colony, old man."

Repairs Canoe

There was a dance down at the hotel in the village that night. Barry went down because he had nothing else to do. He loafed about the hotel veranda and talked fishing with some of the natives, but he didn't go in to dance.

Between dances Olive came out. Mr. Unger was standing in the wide open doorways of the hotel, but Olive strolled down to one of the chairs. Barry was sitting on the top step at this time.

"Aren't you going to dance?" Ollie asked.

She repeated it.

Barry looked up.

"No, thanks," he said.

Why not?"

"Your boy friend will get sore if you talk to me," Barry growled, indicating Mr. Unger, still in the doorway.

Barry got up and sauntered away.

Ollie laughed.

That settled it. Barry was on the point of turning back and apologizing, but not after Ollie laughed like that. He went out and got into his roadster. He opened up the cutout and filled the country roads with sharp echoes for some hours.

When he drove home the Dane cottage was quite dark.

The next day was equally as perfect.

The Cameo Lake cottagers couldn't remember when they had had three weeks of such perfect weather as this. They talked about it a great deal.

Barry was down at the landing bright and early.

He busied himself putting patching cement on some scraped places on the bottom of his canoe. The stuff was a dark brown and sticky. He had it on his hands and face and smeared over what had once been white duck trousers.

Moreover, he was smoking an atrocious old pipe and his feet were in ancient sneakers that had been slit open for more comfort.

The usual crowd came down for the plunge in the lake.

"Beats all how this keeps up," Merriman said.

Barry didn't answer.

"This swell weather," he went on.

"Rotten weather," Barry growled.

Mrs. Merriman nudged her husband to keep quiet.

Barry went fishing right after he saw Mr. Unger driving over and stopping at the Dane cottage.

This time he went up to the head of the lake, scowled at the ledge under the pine, hid his canoe and went up stream after trout. Despite the clearness of the day he landed a good baker's dozen. His mood made him slow and skillful. All he had to do was to kill time and he could take five minutes getting to a riffle and letting a dry fly float down.

His sister's husband had come on and the three enjoyed the trout.

Merriman came over with some others and they had two tables of bridge.

It must have been after midnight when they quit.

"I guess we're quite a literary colony now," Mrs. Merriman said. "Olive's novel has been accepted and she has contracted to give the Hutman Company her next one. That Mr. Unger is a member of the firm. He married Hutman's daughter. Olive showed me her contract. I bet she'll make a lot of money."

Barry turned a little pale at this and sneaked out the back way.

The Dane cottage was dark. He didn't have the nerve to arouse anyone.

Heavy Storm

In the morning he went over and asked Ollie to go fishing with him.

They paddled up to the ledge and sat on it and said a great many things. Barry's brother-in-law and Merriman and Ostrander had already started up the stream.

Black clouds came up suddenly. There was a sharp wind and then a torrent of rain. It shifted to hail and then back to rain.

The trout fisherman came rushing back for their canoes.

They found Barry and Olive sitting side by side on the ledge, drenched, but they were laughing and gay.

"Say—this is rotten weather enough for you, Barry," Merriman shouted.

"What do you mean, rotten?" Barry asked gaily. "Man, this is swell weather!"

City Manager Bill Revived

The Moore city manager bill, rescued from its shelf in the House Committee on Elections, is to reach the floor of the House after all, and with a recommendation that it be passed. The joke seems to be on the organization politicians.

Delegations of Pittsburghers, representing numerous organizations, had taken trouble to go to Harrisburg to urge advancement of the bill, but Representative Wettach, of the North Side, who last week made the motion to shelve it, gave "lack of interest" as the reason for his action.

Yesterday, when Representative Moore went to work to revive the measure, it seems that organization "lack of interest" contributed to the success of his efforts. Representative Wettach was absent, along with other Pittsburghers.

The joke of it may be on the organization.

The pity of it is that those who believe cities should have the right to institute a city manager scheme, if they wish, owe their thanks to Chairman Moore of the committee, a legislator from another county. Without his help, and the assistance of those he worked with, the bill would be dead.

The lesson of it is that when those interested in constructive measures are not guilty of "lack of interest;" when they work as hard for their bills as do organization leaders for payroll bills, they approach much more nearly to success than when they merely engage in conversation on the evils of politics.

Unused Clothes Wanted

Goodwill Industries Sponsors "Bundle Days" to Aid Poor and Unemployed.

The annual appeal for discarded clothing is made by the Goodwill Industries, which will sponsor three Bundle Days, next week, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, April 14, 15 and 16. Public schools and Boy Scouts will assist.

You are asked to make up a bundle of unwanted wearing apparel that may be in your home and send it by your children to the school they attend. Boy Scouts will collect the bundles at the schools and Goodwill trucks will transport them to the Goodwill plant, 2801 Liberty avenue, where they will be sorted and repaired to make them serviceable. Nothing is wasted.

Thus, all unwanted garments serve two purposes. First they give employment to men and women. Then they provide clothing for men, women and children.

That certainly is a practical charity. One that you can help along by just a little effort on your part. Be sure to make up a bundle. Then send it to any school.

Garden Plan Started

Clubwomen To Provide Seeds and Tools To City's Needy Families.

Pittsburgh clubwomen have instituted a new form of unemployment relief by starting a movement to encourage gardening in this district. Several groups are planning to assist needy families to obtain sites, tools and seeds.

This work is being carried out along lines similar to a plan adopted in Detroit where several thousand families are being helped to start gardens. The produce of the gardens will be a material help in providing at least some of the food for families in difficulty during the summer. Undoubtedly the plan will lighten the burden being placed on charitable organizations.

Like the Pittsburgh plan for unemployment relief, the garden movement offers the most advantageous type of help by providing working hours rather than doles. The benefits of the gardening will not become apparent for several months, but the plan will be helpful as an adjunct to other forms of relief rather than as a complete solution of the problem.

Mrs. John M. Phillips, chairman of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women, has made an additional suggestion which appears to be worth following. She proposed that women of needy families, who have a natural facility for raising flowers, be given permits, like the apple men, to sell flowers on the city streets.

Be Dumb, Girls

If Possible.

Advice to women from Dr. Abdul M. Shad, noted British psychologist:

"If you want to make a hit with men, be dumb."

Dr. Shad, elaborating this profound thought, says:

"I am often asked if a man can love a brainy woman. I reply in a great psychoanalyst's words, 'Women who think are devils to live with.' Why! Because the modern intellectual woman demands a higher grade of mate than has yet appeared on this earth.

"She has struggled up to her own pedestal with great difficulty. She may tumble down (leaving her brains behind) and seize her victim. She takes him home and feeds him, but soon he goes to the woman who mixes him a strong drink and tells him he is wonderful. And back to her lonely pedestal creeps the intellectual woman."

Well, possibly; but you might think that a good deal depended on the man.

As Mr. Kipling said, through one of his characters, "The stupidest woman can handle a clever man, but only a very clever woman can handle a fool."

There may be a field for the woman with brains yet.

Spring Moon-ings

With a florist's shop flourishing on every other corner, one can't help reflecting that there MUST be plenty of romance left in the world, in spite of all this modern cynicism.

A critical or disapproving attitude on either side of a marriage is a spiritual divorce, which no judge and no lawyer can patch up.

Wise men write a love letter as cautiously as though they were writing for publication—and, sometimes, they are!

A man falls in love painfully, slowly—but he falls OUT of love with a swift and sudden jolt. It is like hearing the alarm clock in the middle of a pleasant dream.

Love is not over, until the kiss that was once a temptation becomes an obligation.

The Hollywood romance is probably founded on the beautiful faith that fountain pens, cigaret lighters and marriage all work—SOMETIMES!

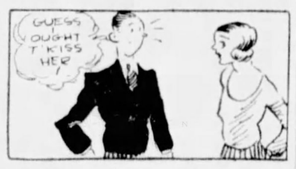
One drink makes a man want to confide in you; two drinks make him want to kiss you; three drinks make him want to kiss EVERYBODY!



A woman in love takes on the vanity of the peacock, the loyalty of the dog, the subtlety of the cat, the suspicion of the lynx and the tenacity of the caterpillar.

The chorus girl used to be the sauce piquante of a young man's life. Now, beside the co-ed, the debutante, the stenographer and the flapper, she is only its orange marmalade.

* * *

A modern girl must look forward to marriage as a sweet release from the eternal monotony of being kissed by a different man every night.

Isn't It So?

A shut mouth never yet got its owner in trouble.

Dreaming while driving is a good way to stay asleep forever.

The day will come when people will point at the man who once walked a mile.

Woman's rights, according to most of them, is that they should never get left.

Of all glad words of tongue or pen, the gladdest are these: "Inclosed find check!"

To increase your business, take time enough from your business to be gracious and polite.

The man who tries to dodge his obligations usually finds the detour much rougher than the road.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, April 9.—Metropolitan dramatic critics have been pelted with a number of stinging volleys this year. Ethel Barrymore, in a temperamental pet, let go a double-barreled barrage. And the fiery Richard Bennett, of course, takes them for a ride in every curtain speech.

Channing Pollock in a recent outburst explained, "The only person who loves a critic is his mother and she loves him because of an animal instinct." A number of disappointed playwrights and players are frequently baiting the critics. It is a Rialto diversion.

As a matter of truth the leading dramatic critics are eminently tolerant and without exception fair. I sat with them at every opening night for a season and was always amazed the next morning at their studious consideration for everyone concerned.

One or two salt their critiques with venom and seem querulously annoyed that performers are allowed to live, but they are the critical show-offs and are not considered seriously. Sarcasm is the most effortless form of writing and is never constructive.

The reviewer who indulges such a cachet of smartness is shooting from ambush. To say the least, he is a literary coward. For those who are the targets have no comeback. They must take it on the chin. Incidentally, there is no record of a personal encounter between actor and critic in New York.

Considering that dramatic critics on morning papers have little more than a half hour at the most to sum up a play, it is remarkable how extraordinarily well they do it. Seldom are they permitted to see an entire play. They generally scurry out in the middle of the closing act.

There are stories that critics go into a huddle between acts and exchange views. Critics are not particularly "pally." They are thrown together in such nightly frequency that they grew rather tired of looking at one another. In the theater they are known as The Death Watch.

Before departing on his world tour, Robert L. Ripley invited his friends to a dinner. In each invitation was a card: "Please present this for spiritual reasons."

The term impresario invariably conjures in my mind the picture of a fussy little man sporting a silk hat and a pointed beard and with a pronounced foreign accent. One sent up his card today. He was fat, florid and Irish, and the only person outside of fiction I ever heard say: "Bejabbers."

* * *

And the expletive "By Golly!" is also no longer heard. It was a favorite in the Gay Nineties. And Weber and Fields gave it a new life in their stage skits. Come to think, it has been a long time since I have heard grandpa's favorite: "Oh, foot!"

So far gastronomical galavantings in New York have failed to flush out a satisfying dish of what was known out in the brier patches as "wet hash." It was a soupy concoction made of chopped up meat, potatoes and generously spiced with onions. Brought on steaming it was an epicurean epic. The Manhattan version is a mess—an olla podrida of left overs in huge lumps tasting like the sour end of a mop touched up with kerosene. Hash in New York is looked upon as a lowly dish of the water fronts. As a matter of fact it is one of America's grandest food offerings. I could wolf a hatful right now—two hours after a whopping breakfast.

As a throw back to depot short-order eating days I often inspire frowns among elegant waiters by asking for "a side dish" of this and that. Vegetables of all sorts to me are "side dishes."

* * *

I remain somewhat like Charlie Murray when he was touring the tanks in "Zeb the Clodhopper." He was in the play dining with a New York swell. At the finish of the meal the swell said to the waiter: "Bring me a demi-tasse." As the waiter departed Murray cried: "Kill me one, too. And bring me a crock of coffee."

SPEED, MANKIND'S GOAL

By Archibald Henderson

The goal of mankind nowadays seems to be speed, speed, and again speed. An airplane has traveled 357 miles an hour around a given course. A special nebula has been discovered that moves at the rate of 11,000 miles a second. Light and radio waves travel at the rate of 136,300 miles per second, approximately. Thus it may be surmised that man will soon be attaining far greater speeds than hitherto believed at all possible.

The increase in airplane speed during the past 20 years has been truly phenomenal. Little more than two decades ago the Wright brothers sought to secure a government contract with planes capable of a top speed of 40 miles an hour. When Onlebar, of the Royal Air Force, hung up a new speed record in the Schneider Cup Races he was traveling almost eight times as fast as were Orville Wright and Lieut. Selfridge when they crashed during army tests in Virginia. The landing speed of Onlebar's machine—think of it!—was more than twice as fast as the highest speed of the Wright airplane.

These greatly increased speeds are due not solely to the alterations in the shape of the planes. Much depends upon the wonderful improvements in the power developed by the new motors. For example, Onlebar's motor developed almost 80 times the horsepower of the Wright engine. The huge DO-X is a slow and heavy machine, weighing 48 tons and attaining a speed of only 126 miles per hour. But Dornier expects soon, by only a few changes, to increase that speed very materially.

How fast has a man traveled in a machine? Almost six miles a minute! Or, if you prefer to put it another way, more than 500 feet a second. It is freely predicted that, on a straight-away course, man will soon be traveling at the rate of a thousand feet per second.

The layman is naturally interested in the problem of measurement of bodies of space, such as the speedy spiral nebula recently studied by Humason. This is done by spectroscopic methods. These bodies are traveling away from the earth and the velocity measured is called radical velocities. These velocities are measured by means of spectral lines and their positions on the scale, formulas for which have been accurately worked out. When a body is moving away from us, the vibrations of its light will appear to be slowed down. The rays of the star's spectrum will appear a little redder. The characteristic lines will have moved their positions on the scale, having shifted toward the red end of the scale. The extent of this spectral shift serves as a measure of stellar velocity. By means of the formula, connecting frequency, displacement and velocity, the astronomer is able to compute the speed of the stellar body.

Just Such Trifles

Merest trifles may have potent parts to play,
Light as petals windward drifting,
Yet with sovereign forces lifting,
Little things may lend glad meaning to the day.

Joy may come from some one passing on your road;
Just a fancy, just a folly
Still may rout old Melancholy,
And give strength that you will need for any load.

Then in turn, in spreading blisses
you may share;
It may not seem worth the trouble,
But there's beauty in a bubble;
Send your word of promise speeding on the air.

You can help make some one cheery all day long.
Bright with hope, perhaps, your speech is
And who knows how far it reaches?
Just such trifles make life's journey sweet as song.

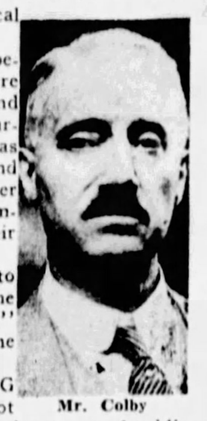
Industrial Dictatorship

Writer in Public Utilities Magazine Says Business Is Going to Have Self-Government.

By BAINBRIDGE COLBY

I AM indebted to its publishers for a copy of the current issue of Public Utilities Fortnightly—a magazine which proclaims that it "treats specifically of the problems incidental to the regulation of public utility companies—as viewed from the economic, financial, legal and political standpoints."



Mr. Colby

It is announced that within "this special field," the magazine "covers the entire range of public utilities—electric light and power companies, street railways, interurban railways, motor vehicle utilities, gas companies, water utilities, telephone and telegraph companies, steam railroads, water transport utilities, express and freight companies, heat utilities, radio utilities and air transport utilities."

My attention was at once attracted to what the publishers describe as "the LEADING ARTICLE in this number," which occupies, to use their phrase, "the place of honor in this magazine."

The title of the article is "LET BIG BUSINESS REGULATE ITSELF"—not a surprising plea in view of the comprehensive range of public utilities which the magazine has adopted for "its special field."

I FIND the position confidently taken that "THE STATE CANNOT REGULATE BUSINESS IN GENERAL OR PUBLIC UTILITIES IN PARTICULAR."

The reasons assigned for this opinion are that "CORRUPTION HAS SUCCEEDED IN THE UNITED STATES, THAT BUSINESS HAS WON ITS WAY TO POWER; THAT POLITICS IS BEATEN AND REFORM IS LICKED."

The author of the article is Mr. Lincoln Steffens, who a quarter of a century ago won distinction by a sensational series of exposures appearing in the magazines, entitled "The Shame of the Cities," which were the GENESIS of SEARCHING and FRUITFUL REFORM movements in American municipal government.

But this redoubtable foe of corruption, whether it was found in business or in politics, has apparently grown weary with the passing years and now avows himself defeated as a reformer.

"We are passing out of the period of opinion," says Mr. Steffens, "when decisions and actions were based upon considerations of right and wrong. * * * The consequence has been always the same—POLITICAL CORRUPTION, WHICH RESULTS IN THE REGULATION OF THE REGULATORS. Business has 'had to' run politics and govern the state. IT WAS BUSINESS MEN WHO SAID THAT THEY 'HAD TO' USE BRIBERY AND CORRUPTION."

He continues:

"BRIBERY AND CORRUPTION CANNOT BE DEALT WITH AS FORMS OF FELONY, but must be regarded as items of a process, of a natural, inevitable force, which was necessary to make a government formed by an agricultural people, represent an industrial era. IN A SENSE, THEN, BRIBERY WAS AN ACT OF GOD."

MR. STEFFENS, who views corruption as everywhere present in our life, and steadily increasing, nevertheless feels that its triumph is not quite complete.

"The process of corrupting the American democracy into an industrial dictatorship," he says, is not quite finished, but he adds, "it is near enough to the end to enable a willing observer to foresee that business or industry will either GOVERN THE GOVERNMENT OR GOVERN ITSELF, OR BOTH.

"Business is going to have," he says, "directly or indirectly, what business men long have wanted: self-government, THE GOVERNMENT OF BUSINESS BY BUSINESS, FOR BUSINESS."

AND the article concludes with the question: ARE THE BUSINESS MEN READY FOR IT?

Possibly they are more than ready. They might be said to be even willing and eager for it, judging by the way they hover about the seats of legislation, seeking to guide, deflect or stay, in their own interest, the processes of law-making and regulation.

But there is a preliminary question to be answered, before reply need be given to the question asked by Mr. Steffens.

IS AMERICA READY FOR IT?

Heaven forbid! And so long as America is America—IT WILL NOT BE READY FOR IT.

We have erred, and strayed from the PATHWAYS OF THE COUNTRY'S FOUNDERS. We have been REMISS in the performance of our duties as citizens—in vigilance, in the careful and studious judgment of men and measures, in the stern and prompt casting away of traitorous and corrupt officials.

But, let those who contemplate the shortcomings of democracy with unconcealed complacency, remember that we have been to war—with a resultant dislocation on a vast scale of our national life and social habitudes. We have assumed great burdens and are struggling to carry them. We have grown confused at times.

We have listened to the siren voice of material success, and have SHIRKED the rugged road of duty and responsibility.

THERE IS MUCH TO BE DONE, WE ALL KNOW, TO PUT OUR HOUSE IN ORDER.

BUT AMERICA IS NOT READY—although big business may feel itself approaching the point—to admit even "in a sense" that bribery is an act of God, or that corruption has succeeded in the United States.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

As a parent do you try too hard to shape the lives of your children?

Do you suggest and try to persuade them to enter lines of work in which they are not interested and never would be successful for that reason?

Interest is essential to real success.

As little tots you paid little attention to their expressions of preference for this and that.

At the adult stage you are alarmed at the best they show in certain directions.

You had mapped out their lives so differently.

What you had planned does not appeal to them in any sense.

You wonder if they are your children after all.

You don't see how they can be so very different.

On the other hand the young mind is intent upon a future course and resents the hold-up that you try to exert.

With the faith of a parent you think they might succeed in any course.

You don't like their choice—you think they should choose a white-collared job and if they don't, you think they are making a mistake.

Give the boy or the girl a chance to be themselves, and encourage them to press forward and try their wings.
